ADOLPH SONNET

Frank Scott and Patrick Trapuzziano were injured when the Stowe Township fire department truck plunged down an embankment today while the company was speeding to the refinery fire in Heidelberg. Adolph Sonnet was fatally injured, dying on the way to a hospital.

2 FIREMEN DIE UNDER TRUCK

Two Stowe township volunteer firemen were fatally hurt and eight companions injured, five seriously, when their fire truck plunged down an embankment off Windgap road, near Ingram, while they were speeding to Heidelberg to help fight a $500,000 oil fire in the plant of the Carnegie Refining Company early today.

The two who died in hospitals were Adolph Sonnett, 30, and Joseph De Petro, 45.

Another fireman was seriously injured at the scene of the blaze. More than 150 volunteer fire fighters spent the better part of the 24 hours trying to control the flames that for a time threatened to sweep over the 20-acre plant and destroy the homes of Heidelberg residents. A dozen other volunteers received minor injuries.

PLUNGE INTO GULLY

The dead firemen and their injured companions were members of Company No. 2, of the Stowe Township Volunteer Fire Department. The heavy combination pumper and hose cart leaped from the roadway on a curve about a half mile from the Ingram borough line and somersaulted down into the gully below.

John Caputo, 44, driver of the truck; Attela Baptisto, 22, Michael and Nicholas Deangelis, brothers, and Carl Moyer, all are in serious conditions in the Ohio Valley Hospital. Patrick Trauuzzanio, 22, Romeo Leo, 23, and Gustave Galando, 20, were taken home after being treated at the hospital.

The oil fire, which started at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, caused $200,000 loss before it was declared extinguished late yesterday afternoon. Shortly before last midnight, the flames broke out anew and spread to several small tanks in the distilling and refining department. Calls were sent out for aid and volunteers from Crafton, Ingram, Glendale, Kirwin Heights, Bridgeville, Stowe township, Bower Hill, Carnegie, East Carnegie, Dormont, Mt. Lebanon and Castle Shannon responded as did two city companies.

DAMAGE OF $500,000

At daybreak today there were more than 150 volunteer firemen on the scene still pouring water on the ruins of the one large brick and steel building. Robert Burr, plant superintendent, estimated the total damage as approximating $500,000 from both fires. The blaze last night was confined to the one

DEFENSE HITS AT LEGALITY OF DRY LAW

The national prohibition act, in so far as it makes possession of intoxicating liquor a crime, is unconstitutional, it is averred in a motion filed in Federal Court today, for arrest of judgment in the case of the Standard Ice Company and two officers of the company, found guilty of conspiracy to violate the act.

The motion, filed by Attorneys Charles B. Prichard and George Wasser, also sets forth that the jurisdiction of the United States is limited by the Eighteenth Amendment to the manufacture, sale and transportation of intoxicating liquor.

The Standard Company, Albert Miller, secretary and treasurer, and George D. Lyons, general manager and chief engineer, were convicted December 20. Five employes, also tried, were acquitted.

The trial followed raids by prohibition agents, and seizure of alleged high test beer stored in the company's plant, in River avenue, North Side.

CHRISTMAS U.S. TRADE 5 BILLION

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—Uncle Sam went on the greatest buying spree of all time in the 1928 Christmas shopping season, Dr. Julius Klein, director of foreign and domestic commerce, declared today.

Klein is among the possibilities mentioned for the commercial portfolio in President-elect Hoover's cabinet. He probably has the most accurate grasp on general business conditions of any man in Washington.

While Klein did not care to estimate the volume of business, explaining that such figures cannot be entirely accurate until the government is authorized to make a census of distribution, other experts fixed retail trade at from $40,000,000,000 to $60,000,000,000 for the year.

About one-tenth of that gigantic figure probably took place in December, fixing the Christmas bill at approximately $5,000,000,000.

Chain stores probably made the greatest increase over the 1927 business volume, although the department stores in most cities and the mail order houses showed large boosts.

Throughout the year retail trade statistics furnished by the reserve banks indicated that stocks were being held well down to the demand and that even there has been some tendency to the so-called "hand-to-mouth" buying. That means a maximum of new goods and a minimum of left-over stuff for the retail trade.

SET LIVINGSTON HEARING

The Civil Service Commission will hold a hearing next week to probe the circumstances of the dismissal by Mayor Charles H. Kline of Murray Livingston, head of the city bureau of weights and measures.

Dr. F. H. Frederick, chairman of the commission, announced Livingston's appeal for a hearing was received by the commission today.

Livingston was dismissed after he testified before the Public Service Commission that he had fired an employe of his department on orders from Mayor Kline because the employe had not followed political orders.

The employe, Andrew W. Nolan, was reinstated by the Civil Service Commission and Livingston's dismissal "for the good of the service" followed.

CORONER'S AFFIDAVIT AWAITED

By MAX HENRICI,
Staff Correspondent.

CANTON, O., Dec. 26.—Wilbur O. Heldman today engaged Frank Sweitzer, former prosecuting attorney of Stark county, to defend him against the threatened murder charge in the death of his wife, Margaret.

Mrs. Heldman shot herself to death, according to Heldman's story, while on the way to surrender for the murder of Vernard E. Fearn on the doorstep of his home on the night of December 6.

Coroner T. C. McQuate announced he will file an affidavit soon that will bring Heldman's case before the grand jury.

NO TANGIBLE SUSPICION

As matters now stand the accusation against Heldman will be based on nothing more substantial than suspicion and inconsistencies in things he has told the authorities.

Heldman said his wife shot herself and the authorities cannot disprove his statement. He was the only witness to her act. It is possible Heldman might have had a motive for shooting her, in the jealousy aroused by her confession of her relations with Fearn, Harter said, it has been decided to let the grand jury pass in the case. The easiest method of bringing the case before that body is to accuse Heldman.

In the meanwhile search is being made for evidence that may incriminate Heldman.

Mary Stenger, a woman who is said to have been his confidante in many matters, is being sought by the police, in hope that Heldman may have told her some of the

WARN REED GRILL MAY HASTEN DEATH

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—The detailed history of the illness of Senator-elect William S. Vare was revealed here today by his physician, Dr. Elwood R. Kirby, in stating why Vare cannot appear before the Senate committee investigating campaign funds in Washington, January 4, to defend his election to the Senate.

Dr. Kirby said a letter signed by himself and two other physicians was sent to Senator James A. Reed, chairman of the committee, on December 10, giving the committee complete information as to the state of Vare's health.

The letter stated Vare's illness really dated from May 11, although he was stricken with paralysis August 1, and that because of his health, the Philadelphia Republican leader had been urged not to attend the Republican national convention in Kansas City.

LIFE JEOPARDY CLAIMED

In refusing to permit Vare to appear before the Reed committee January 4, the physicians declared the ordeal would work great hardship on their patient and might even jeopardize his life.

Dr. Kirby pointed out that the paralytic stroke on August 1 was the result of the strain Vare was under during the convention, and expressed the opinion that the Senator-elect would recover the use of his paralyzed arm and leg in time and be able to attend to his political and business affairs as in the past.

CALLED FOR JAN. 4

The campaign funds committee announced in Washington last week that it would not postpone Vare's appearance before it after January 4. Thus far Vare has made no official comment on the committee's decision. He still is at his home in Atlantic City, where his physicians said it is necessary for him to remain until his recovery is more promising.

Statements that Senator-elect Vare was planning to return to his home and assume active leadership of Philadelphia politics at once were denied in Atlantic City by his daughter, Beatrice Vare.

Christmas Day was one of the mildest on record. The temperature range was from 34 degrees to 47, with the sun shining from a cloudless sky.

Numerous diversions await Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge during their stay on Sapelo Island. The island and its adjacent waters will afford both fresh water and deep sea fishing.

Sapelo Island, as well as the entire 100-mile Georgia coast, abounds in historical interest and lore. Blackbeard, the noted pirate, and those engaged in slave traffic, made the island their retreat.

Mr. Coolidge as yet has not decided when he will return to the national capitol, but it generally is understood his trip into the South will not extend beyond the second of January.

building which housed the distilling and refining departments.

When the fire was at its heighth early today, flames were leaping from all parts of the building, threatening five tanks each containing 5,000 barrels of wax oil and eight tanks each of 1,000-barrel capacity containing kerosene. At the extreme end of the plant there were several large tanks of 20,000- and 10,000-barrel capacity containing refined gasoline.

There were scores of small explosions, endangering the lives of the firemen as well as hundreds of Heidelberg residents who gathered on the hillsides to watch the flames. Many families in nearby residences left their homes when it seemed as though the flames would get beyond control of the firemen. The plant is at Ellsworth and First streets, the site of the old Etna chemical plant, in which a serious explosion occurred during the World War.

INVESTIGATION STARTED

The cause of the fire has not yet been determined and company officials have begun an investigation. Workmen discovered the first fire about 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning and immediately called Heidelberg firemen to aid them. When the blaze spread, help was summoned from six other communities. Firemen remained on the scene all day, making sandwiches and hot coffee their Christmas repasts.

Frank Scott, a member of the Glendale fire department, was injured seriously when thrown against a wall by a buckling hose. He was removed to the Presbyterian Hospital, where it was stated the extent of his injuries had not yet been determined.

Fire Marshall Thomas L. Pfarr was on the scene for several hours last night and directed the work of the volunteer firemen.

More than a dozen firemen who received minor injuries were treated at an emergency hospital established by Dr. L. E. Ramsey, of Carnegie.

The heavy fog that covered Windgap road in the valley between Stowe township and Ingram is believed responsible for the truck leaving the highway. Another Stowe township company had spent most of the day at the scene of the fire.

things the authorities want to know.

SLATER LEAVES

Ora M. Slater, Cincinnati detective, who has been working on the case at the request of Prosecuting Attorney Henry W. Harter, Jr., has finished his investigation and departed.

Harter has asked Merton O. Robinson, of Bridgeport, Conn., a firearms expert, if he can tell by examination of the pistol used in the killing of Fearn and Mrs. Heldman how many times it was fired since it was last cleaned. Robinson has not yet replied.

The questions he wants answered are:

"Was the pistol cleaned after the Fearn shooting?

"If so, did Mrs. Heldman clean it?

"Is it likely that she would have done so under the circumstances?

"If she did not clean it, who did?"

Coroner McQuate's affidavit showing the result of his inquest and recommending that Heldman be held for the grand jury on a murder charge, may be filed Friday. The grand jury will meet January 7.

The principal Essex improvements include four hydraulic shock absorbers as standard equipment, chromium plate, larger and roomier bodies and a heavier and more powerful motor.

Both models come equipped with four-wheel brakes. The Hudson hood is higher and wider. The Essex radiator has been heightened, widened and lengthened, radiator and hood being slightly peaked. Radiator caps on both cars are snug and faceted in semi-modernistic design to match the hub caps.

Vibration in both cars is greatly minimized through elaboration of the patented super-six principle and a "cushioned" flow of power is featured in both lines.

Regarding the Kellogg pact, Senator Reed said:

CALIFORNIAN WINS SCHOOL AWARD

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—A former New York prohibition administrator and a 15-year-old high school boy from Herbert Hoover's home town are victors in William C. Durant's $30,000 prize contest for the best prohibition enforcement plan.

Maj. Chester P. Mills, who resigned as prohibition administrator for the New York city district a year ago last June, won the main prize of $25,000.

Malcolm D. Almack, a junior in Palo Alto, Cal., High School, won the $5,000 school prize. The boy receives $1,000 and his school $4,000.

DIVERSION CALLED BANE

More drastic restrictions and closer supervision of traffic in industrial alcohol to curb diversion into illicit channels were suggested by Maj. Mills.

Education of the people concerning the prohibition law, teaching more respect for the law and a more scientific selection of enforcement officers were the high points in Almack's plan.

Checks for the prizes were received yesterday by Maj. Mills at his home in Green Farms, Conn., and by Almack and the principal of his school in Palo Alto.

Approximately half of the 23,230 plans submitted in the contest were sent in by women.

Only 744 suggested modification of the eighteenth amendment, while 5,340 urged modification of the Volstead act. Of these 1,536 favored manufacture and sale of intoxicants, and 400 wanted light wines and beer.

PENNSYLVANIA SECOND

The prize offer, which was made by Mr. Durant August 27, evoked replies from every state in the Union, every territorial possession of the United States, Canada and many foreign countries.

New York State, with 2,104 plans, led the number of contestants, Pennsylvania was second with 1,455.

In the handling of denatured alcohol, Maj. Mills urged closer scrutiny of persons and concerns to whom permits are issued and declared for the elimination of the independent denaturing plants, which, he says, are forced to divert of their output into bootleg channels to make a profit.

Stricter supervision of perfume plants and similar concerns to prevent them disposing of alcohol to bootleggers through "cover houses" is urged in the Mills plan.

The lad who brings to his school $4,000 and to himself $1,000 is only 15 years old. He is the son of Prof. John C. Almack, of the Stanford University department of education. He is a junior in Palo Alto High School and was born in Rockford, Wash.

STUDENT TURNS ROBBER FOR THRILL, SHOT DEAD

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Shot by a policeman while fleeing yesterday from a building where he had robbed a safe, Thomas Donald Hall, 21, a sophomore at the University of Redlands, California, is dead and two juniors of the same school face arraignment here today on a burglary charge after confessing paticipation in the robbery.

Hall's companions, William Cornewell Cooney, 21, and George I. Keller, 23, declared they robbed the safe because they needed Christmas money. At Del Rosa, Cal., T. S. Hall, father of the slain student, said young Hall had all the money he needed and expressed the opinion the boy had participated in the robbery for a thrill.

Patrolman Thaddeus Ornes encountered the three students, and when Ornes commanded them to throw up their hands Hall drew a gun and commanded him to do likewise.

Ornes shot twice and Hall fell, mortally wounded. Keller threw his gun into an alley and ran after Ornes had fired two shots at him.

Police said Keller and Cooney told them they ran short of money and hatched the robber plot.

At Redlands, President V. L. Duke, of the university, declared all three students had good records. He described Hall as an average student with a "very good record."

CRIPPLES MAKE MERRY AS SANTA REMEMBERS

Santa Claus yesterday filled each and every one of the 77 stockings hung up by boys and girls of the Industrial Home for Crippled Children, Denniston avenue.

With their stockings bulging with toys, candy, cookies, nuts and fruit, and 12 heavily-trimmed Christmas trees shedding their brilliance, the children enjoyed a Christmas such as few of them rarely enjoyed at home.

Festivities began before breakfast. Jolly old Kris Kringle made the rounds through all quarters, while a band of children followed him, singing carols.

Miss Frances E. Shirley, superintendent of the home, led her charges in the singing. Later in the day the children sat down to an old-fashioned Christmas dinner of turkey and cranberry sauce and all the trimmings.

GEORGE WEERNEKE AND NURSE

Few Pittsburgh children were made happier by Santa Claus on Christmas morning than was George Weerneke, a crippled boy at the Industrial Home for Crippled Children. His nurse helps him to unwrap his gifts.

OPENING GIFTS

Seventy-seven stockings, bulging with toys, candy, cookies, fruit and nuts, were hanging from the chimney when the inmates of the home rose shortly after dawn. From their smiling faces it is evident that Santa Claus brought them more than they had expected to receive. See what fun they had unwrapping their gifts.

HAPPY WITH DOLL

Dorothy Rightnor had sent Santa a letter asking him for a big baby doll, and, to her surprise, a beautiful doll, dressed in pink and blue, was tucked in her arms by Kris Kingle himself.

HOME FOLKS HONOR ROEBLING, GREAT BRIDGE BUILDER

CHURCH ROEBLING BUILT

HIS FIRST FACTORY

STARTING POINTS IN CAREER

In the little hamlet of Saxonburg, near Butler, stands memorial to John A. Roebling, builder of the Brooklyn Bridge. It is the historic old German Evangelical Church, pictured at the lower left, which was built by the famous bridge builder when he founded Saxonburg shortly after his arrival in this country, 97 years ago.

The church has been redecorated and has been re-dedicated in honor of the man who brought fame to himself and Saxonburg. The original factory where Roebling made his first wire rope, in 1841, is shown in lower center. Strands were laid out in a field and twisted by men in Roebling's employ. Brooklyn Bridge, across the top, is Roebling's outstanding achievement, a monumental engineering feat.

In the little church at Saxonburg today, villagers point with pride to the bas relief likeness of Roebling, shown at the right, top, and boast of his having founded the town.

At the lower right is Mrs. Amelia Knoch, 91, the only Roebling relative now living in Saxonburg. Mrs. Knoch is a niece of the famous bridge builder.

WIFE WOUNDER HELD AS HE SEEKS NEWS

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 26.—As he entered a room in Uniontown Hospital to learn how badly his wife was wounded, Michael Capuri, of Republic, was arrested today, charged with the shooting.

In a critical condition from wounds in the abdomen, the wife, Mrs. Florence Capuri, screamed when her husband appeared at the door of her room. He dashed out of the hospital into the arms of Constable Harry Hart, of Republic, who had trailed him. He admitted shooting his wife, police say, as she sat in her father's restaurant yesterday in Republic, because she refused to return to him.

BIG PNEUMONIA INCREASE HERE

With an increase of 100 per cent in the number of cases of pneumonia reported in Pittsburgh for December, as compared with the same period for 1927, city health authorities today advised victims of influenza attacks to avoid exposure and fatigue and to be watchful of their general health. Improvement in conditions, with a marked falling off in pneumonia, is looked for within 10 days.

"Pneumonia is the aftermath of influenza," said Dr. Philip E. Marks, superintendent of the bureau of infectious diseases, who, today is remaining at his home at the bedsides of several patients in his own family. "Although the form of influenza prevalent here since December 8 has been comparatively mild in its attacks, it leaves the victim in a weakened state and susceptible to any pneumonia germs that may be lurking around."

PAY DEMANDED BY SUSPENDED PATROLMAN

Suspended without a hearing, he alleged, Patrolman Patrick J. Delehanty, veteran East End patrolman has sued the city for $800 back salary.

Delehanty said he was suspended July 31 without a hearing and since then had been placed on the retired list. He asks four months salary at $200 per month. Suit was filed in county court by Attorney Harry E. Richter.

Delehanty's case is similar to that of Andrew W. Nolan, employe of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, discharged without a hearing but later reinstated by the Civil Service Commission.

Nolan, who charged politics was responsible for his dismissal, was ordered given back pay in full.

Delehanty seeks only the amount of salary which would have been due him from the time he was suspended until he was placed on the city pension roll.

LEEDS STRESSES CLAIM GIRL IS CZAR'S DAUGHTER

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—William B. Leeds has reaffirmed his belief in the claim made for Mme. Tschaikowski, Russian mystery woman, that she is the youngest daughter of the late Czar.

Mme. Tschaikowski, or as her friends insist, the Grand Duchess Anastasia, was in seclusion in the Long Island home of the Leeds for several months after her arrival in this country. Where she is now, is undisclosed.

Mr. Leeds arived yesterday on the liner Majestic with his wife, the Princess Xenia of Russia. He said in regard to Mme. Tschaikowski:

"I believe for myself that she is the Grand Duchess. My wife is convinced that she is. She came to us a very ill woman. She has not ever made an assertion about herself. She does not seem interested. Most of the relatives of the late Czar who declare she is not the Grand Duchess have never even taken the t rouble to see her. Frankly, I do not know anything about it, but my wife is certain and I think she is in a position to know. She has not been at our home for five months, but when she wishes to come back we will be glad to have her."

GUESTS CHOKE, BEAT, BITE AT FILM PARTY

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 26.—Lottie Pickford, former film player and sister of Mary Pickford, today was thought to be in a private hospital following a beating administered her by a guest at her Christmas eve party.

Jack Daugherty, cinema actor, once husband of the late Barbara La Marr, who denied he had attended the Pickford party, is said in the police report to have almost chewed a finger off Daniel Jaeger, reputed capitalist, in a battle over attentions shown Miss Pickford.

LOTTIE CHOKED

While the two men were engaged in fisticuffs and mastication, another guest, according to police, held Miss Pickford on the driveway in front of her home, choking her with one hand and pummeling her with the other.

Police rushing to the party in response to telephone complaints against the "all night rodeo," described by irate and sleepless neighbors, found several unnamed film players in attendance.

Detectives were trying to link the mystery fight at the party with the story told by Miss Pickford several weeks ago that while riding with Daugherty they had been held up by four men who attempted to rob her after striking her.

GARY'S ESTATE 13 MILLION

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—An appraisal of the estate of the late Judge Elbert H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, at his death August 15, 1927, places its net value at $12,938,072.28.

The appraisal was made for the New York State Tax Commission and was based on figures prepared by the New York Trust Company, managing executor and trustee of the Gary estate.

His realty holdings, including his 110-acre estate at Jericho, N. Y., were valued at $716,076. Gross value of personal property was estimated at $16,700,069.29, of which $2,297,763 represented proceeds from the auction sale of the Gary art collection.

The trust company has approved debt claims against the estate of $2,478,073.01.

The award was based on his article which offered a workable plan for the control of the Mississippi at high water.

MILKMAN SEES FIRE, SAVES TWO BOYS

Albert Gerald, 5, and his brother, Francis, 7, were rescued yesterday by a milkman who broke down a door of their home at 322 Caruthers avenue, Glendale, and carried them to safety after had detected a fire in the house while the parents were attending church services. Chester Obney, a milkman, of first avenue, Heidelberg, was the rescuer.

The fire started in a room where the children had their Christmas presents on display. All that they saved of their gifts were a bicycle and a desk and chair. Glendale firemen responded and extinguished the blaze within a few minutes. Damage was estimated at $500. The boys were in a second floor bedroom when the blaze was discovered and Obney had to break down a rear door.

The home of J. E. Kingsley, of 827 Seventh avenue, Coraopolis was damaged to the extent of $300 when the tree caught fire, it was reported, from a spark from a toy train in operation beneath the tree.

A $200 fire occurred in the home of A. F. King, at 815 South Braddock avenue, Wilkinsburg, from the same reason, police say.

WOMAN IN BALM SUIT DENIED DIVORCE

Holding that the allegations of the wife were "too trivial" to constitute a valid basis for divorce, Judge Josiah Cohen today refused a decree to Esteele R. Hess, of 25 Grant avenue, Bellevue, from Edward S. Hess.

Hess was plaintiff in a suit for $20,000 damages for alienation of affections against his father-in-law, Samuel D. Rheams, of Bellevue, several years ago. He originally was awarded $5,000, but Rheams was granted a new trial. The case was settled last February 1 and marked "discontinued" in the Prothonotary's office.

Mrs. Hess, at the hearing of her divorce case, testified her husband was indifferent to her. They were married in 1912. The husband testified his wife told him in 1925 she had to leave him as her father was bitter against him and her father "had the money." They met frequently downtown for six months thereafter, he said; went to theaters and to church together.

In rebuttal Mrs. Hess testified she had gone to Sunday school in Bellevue and that her husband came to church and sat in the same pew with her, but that she wouldn't speak to him. She denied telling her husband her father had threatened to disinherit her and wanted her to seek a divorce, and marry someone else.

HOME CHRISTMAS FAILS TO LIFT AMNESIA VEIL

FORSYTH, Ga., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—A stranger joined the family of Dr. R. C. Goolsby at Christmas dinner yesterday—Tom Scott Goolsby, the physician's amnesia-stricken son, who dropped from sight a year and a half ago, had journeyed here to spend the holidays at the insistence of his parents, in hope that familiar surroundings might dissolve the veil that prevents him from recalling anything before July 27, 1927.

But after five days at home, days during which childhood playmates and innumerable friends of former days have talked with him of events in the past, Tom Scott Goolsby remains a stranger.

Physicians whom the family have consulted declare the youth to be the strangest amnesia victim they have encountered. Not only does he fail to recall the events of childhood or immediately preceding his disappearance a few days before he said he "woke up" on the New Orleans waterfront, July 27, 1927. But friends say he does not even indulge in pleasures that he enjoyed prior to his disappearance.

A crack shot, and fond of hunting before he disappeared, Goolsby now tells friends:

"I don't know how to handle a gun, and besides, why should anyone kill anything?"

Young Goolsby used to smoke cigars. Now he says: "I can't smoke cigars, I smoke cigarets."

Contents of letters written to him by young women years ago have elicited only the remark that they are "foolish." He is unable to recall attending Emory University, of which he is a graduate.

Dr. and Mrs. Goolsby spent a large sum of money searching for their son before they located him in Tyler, Tex., in September, this year. He was employed there by a firm which knew him as J. C. Morrison.

ZIEGFELD HAILS 'SHOWBOAT' AS LIFE'S IDEAL

By FLORENZ ZIEGFELD

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Reviewing and appraising my production record as the new year approaches, I find my self very proud and fond of "Show Boat," which is rounding out its first year at the Ziegfeld Theater and like Ol' Man River, "just keeps rollin' along."

It is quintessentially American—as native to the soil of these United States as the Indian and the Mississippi.

I long dreamed of a musical masterpiece that with story and tune and lyric would sum up a colorful era. My dream comes true in "Show Boat." I know that it is a great and honest document of a period treated in terms of the theater.

PORTRAYS FOUR DECADES

From the late 70's on through the World's Fair and down to the radio, "Show Boat" is a cross section of the Middle West.

I saw the gilded floating theaters as a boy in Illinois. They took me far away from the fenced, the ordered and the routined, and lit up gorgeous cloud castles on far horizons. They gave me all the glamour of the stage.

In Chicago as a young man I felt that quickening growth and power that came to us all when we passed the portals of the White City where America for a summer worshiped art and beauty as well as machines and wealth. I have lived on to the age of radio, and I feel that the 40 years covered by "Show Boat" are summed up in their essence as never before in any art form.

"Ol' Man River" alone would make the fame of 'Show Boat." It is a superb lyric set to unforgetable music.

ADDS ONE DETAIL

After a year, I can think of only one new detail of realistic production, and that is the addition to the cotton blossom equipment of a powerful calliope, or "callyope," such as the show boats were wont to blow for a ballyhoo along the inland rivers when tieing up for a performance at the river wharves. As one native of the Ohio Valley wrote the other day after seeing "Show Boat."

"The 'Callyope' to the youth of a generation that didn't know the saxophone and the radio was the music of another world—a world of romance, of the glamour of men and women who seemed to live the most glorious lives imaginable."

He missed a "callyiope" at the Ziegfeld Theater and I am installing one in time for the first anniversary celebration tonight, and for the second year of the run. It will be the old steam outfit and the "callyope" player will be a veteran of the Mississippi and its navigable tributaries, who in Cap'n Andy's heydey woke the echoes with "There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," "After the Ball is Over" and 'Good Morning, Carrie."

That's all I can do for 'Show Boat" after studying it hundreds of times.

HOOVER BELIEVED DODGING EXTRA CONGRESS SESSION

METHOD SEEN IN CHANGE OF ITINERARY

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—Herbert Hoover's decision to return to Washington for a week or 10 days before proceeding to Florida was ascribed here today as due to his desire to avoid, if possible, an extra session of the new Congress after March 4. He is coming to the capital for conferences with congressional leaders.

During the ten days, in addition, Mr. Hoover plans meetings here with some prospective cabinet material. Several men, whose names have not been divulged, have been invited to meet the president-elect during his stay here.

It is no secret that the President-elect is averse to starting his administration off with an extra session. How he is going to avoid it, however, is another matter.

Republican members of the agricultural West and those from the industrial Northeast have joined in the agitation for this special session. The westerners want farm relief legislation; the easterners want tariff revision—upward.

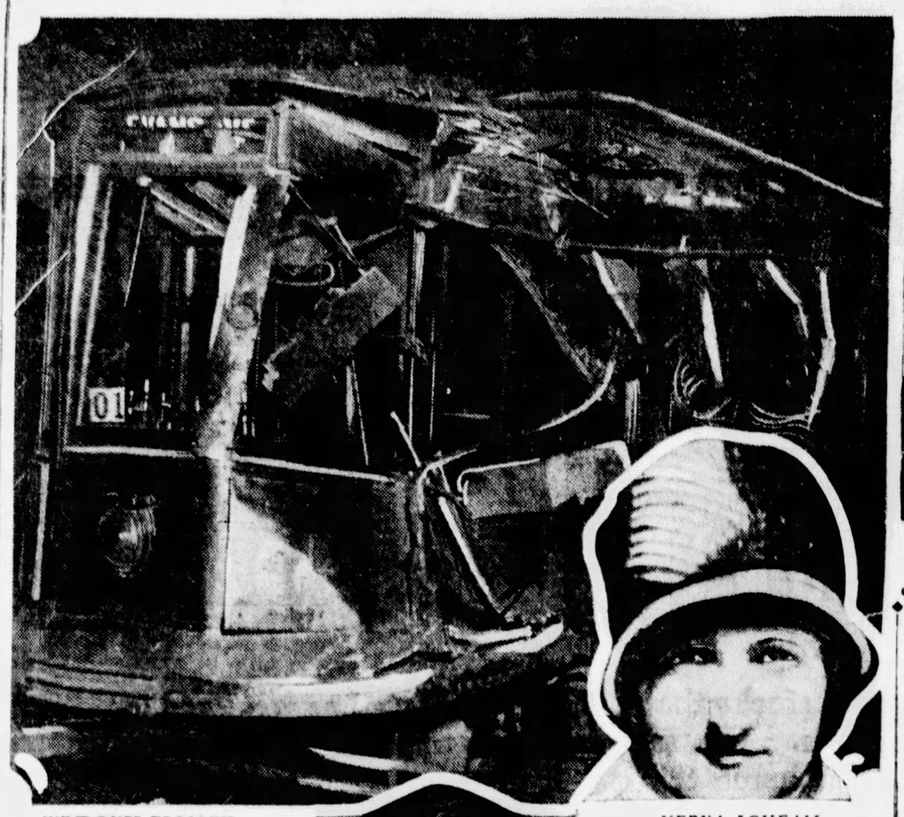
Mr. Hoover is committed to calling a special session only if the present short session does not enact farm relief legislation.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.
International News Service.

ABOARD U. S. S. UTAH, Via Arlington (Va.) Radio Station, Dec. 26.—With 11 days of uninterrupted cruising still ahead before the battleship Utah reaches Old Point Comfort, Va., on January 6, President-elect Hoover today "took things easy" to conserve his energy for the busy days which will face him after he reaches Washington.

A holiday atmosphere still pervaded aboard the Utah today. Christmas decorations were in evidence everywhere. The celebration, with Christmas carols, was climaxed by a dinner on the ship last night.

CAR DEATH RODE AS YULETIDE PASSENGER



WRECKED TROLLEY

Wreckage of the Pittsburgh-McKeesport car which was ripped from cab to rear platform by another which left the rails Christmas Eve. The car was loaded with Christmas shoppers, hastening home to greet Santa Claus.

LAMAUL BERADINO

Beradino was motorman of the wrecked trolley. He escaped with minor injuries.

VERNA LOVEALL

Harry Loveall's cousin, Verna Loveall, 15, was killed as tragedy smote the riders so gay in anticipation of Christmas.

HARRY LOVEALL

Harry, 9, of 2605 Fayette street, McKeesport, was injured in the crash.

$12,000 Fire in Braddock Store

Fire in the Book shoe store, 832 Braddock avenue, Braddock, yesterday, caused a loss estimated at $12,000. The blaze was caused by sparks from a bonfire in the rear of the building.

Man Held in Killing, Crutch Used as Club

Using a crutch, according to police, as a club on the head of Mose Kelly, 45, Negro, of 208 Elm street, during an argument early today, George Davis, 35, Negro, of the same address, is alleged to have caused the death of Kelly. Davis was committed to the county jail on a charge of murder.

ANOTHER DEATH IN CAR CRASH PROBABLE

Five persons, one of whom may die, still are in McKeesport Hospital today, the result of the fatal Christmas Eve street car crash in Fifth avenue, McKeesport, in which 17 persons were injured and one killed. The most seriously injured is Harry Loveall, 9, of 2605 Fayette street, McKeesport, cousin of Verna Loveall, 15, of 2613 Forrest avenue, who was killed.

The other four remaining in the hospital, all said to be improving, are: Genevieve Loveall, 14, sister of Harry; Genevieve and Grace Eisaman, sisters, of 406 Oakland avenue, Greensburg, and Eliza Murphy, 715 Josephine street, East McKeesport. Twelve other persons hurt in the crash were able to go home.

SIDE OF CAR RIPPED

The accident occurred Monday night when an outbound Pittsburgh-McKeesport car left the tracks in Fifth avenue, near Riverton street, plowing into the side of an East McKeesport car. The inbound car was crowded with holiday shoppers. The derailed trolley ripped the whole left side out of the other car. Practically all injured were passengers in the East McKeesport car.

Joint probes are being conducted today by both coroner's office and the Railways company, as well as by city officials of McKeesport.

Parting of Ways Home Dinner Held

The Rev. Wesley S. Burnham, of New York, former field secretary for the New York Prison Society, spoke yesterday at a dinner for former prison inmates in the Parting of the Ways Home, Stockton avenue, North Side. The Christmas dinner was furnished the former prisoners by members of the Men's Bible class of the Highland Presbyterian Church. Other speakers were Mrs. Annie McFredries, prison missionary; Eddie Carr, a former inmate of the home, and George A. Martin, a director of the institution.

The Sun-Telegraph Fifteen Cent Pattern

A STYLE WITH DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

A graceful model is here pictured, with plait fulness in the two-piece front, below the upward curve of the long waist. The neck is open above the scalloped closing and is finished with revers facing that join a small coat collar. The sleeve is a fitted model. A belt that may be of material or leather holds the dress to effect slight blousing. Checked woolen in brown and tan tones was selected in this instance, with facings of tan crepe. Moire or satin are also suggested.

The pattern is cut in six sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. To make the dress for a 38-inch size as illustrated in the large view will require 1⅞ yards of 54-inch material together with ⅝ yard of contrasting material for facings on fronts, collar and belt. The width of the skirt at the lower edge with plaits extended is 2 yards.

COUPON.

This pattern will be sent on receipt of 15 cents (silver or 2c and 1c stamps). Make number, name, address, etc., plain. Send to Pattern Department, The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

CHICAGO OPERA TONIGHT

MARION CLAIRE

One of radio's favorite artists, Marion Claire, will sing a double role tonight in the Chicago Civic Opera broadcast of "Tales of Hoffman." She will be heard over KDKA at 10:01 o'clock in the parts of Giulietta and Antonia.

What's on the Air

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor.

Continuing with programs of exceptional merit for the holiday season, Pittsburgh stations tonight will present some very distinguished actors.

Over KDKA at 10:01 o'clock listeners will hear Rene Maison interpret the character of Hoffman in "Tales of Hoffman," by the Chicago Civic Opera Company. Others participating in this broadcast include Marion Claire, Helen Freund, Irene Pavloska, Giuseppe Cavadore and Barre Hill.

From WJAS at 9:30 o'clock mirth-seekers have an enjoyable treat waiting them. Phil Baker, humorist, songster and accordion artist and Sid Silvers, his teammate in comedy, will entertain during the La Palina Smoker. Baker's last success was "A Night in Spain."

Canary birds will sing with the Kolster Hour Orchestra from this station at 10 o'clock, while earlier in the evening, at 8:30 o'clock, several hits by Rogers and Hart will be given by the Columbians.

The outstanding song hits for the last 15 years will be given by the Troubadours at 9 o'clock over WCAE.

"MARIONETTES" WJZ

Gurlitt's overture, "Marionettes," and a selection from Victor Herbert's "Babes in Toyland," both in the Christmas spirit, will be played as the first two numbers of the Slumber Music concert over WJZ at 11 p. m. A cello solo will be given by Oswald Mazzucchi. Other good numbers are Tschaikowsky's "Enchanted Lake" and Grieg's "Elegie."

"Don't Be Like That" will be sung as a duet number on the Fur Trappers program over WEAF at 6:30 o'clock. The concert opens and closes with "Indian Love Call." Hal Kemp's Orchestra will offer "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" and "Limehouse Blues" at 11 o'clock.

The Jeddo Highlanders, an orchestra directed by Hugo Mariani, will play Strauss' "Persian March" during the program of WJZ and WBZ tonight at 7 o'clock. "Petersburg Sleigh Ride," by Ellenberg, gives a spirited musical picture of a ride over the snow-covered roads of the Russian city and Drigo has a light piece, "Valse Bluette." Gottschalk's "Last Hope" will be played as a harp solo by Stefano di Stefano.

Canary birds will again be heard on the air tonight. Some time ago, when the concert orchestra first broadcast, they were very much disturbed by canary birds in the same foyer, which insisted upon accompanying the music. It was some time later that the value of the birds as assisting broadcasters was realized, and, since that time, canaries furnish a regular accompaniment to the orchestra.

10:30 P. M.—Night Club Romances.

How a case of mistaken identity proved of help to a young honeymoon couple, will be told tonight.

This week's tale will concern two honeymoon couples, one from Texas and one from Philadelphia. The Philadelphian is wanted by the police, who enter in search of him in the midst of the night club festivities. How the other couple, finding a sympathetic bond in the fact that another honeymoon pair is concerned, help the culprit to escape, will be the dramatic subject.

In addition to the drama to be enacted dance music and night club entertainment will furnish the usual appropriate background.

Don't take needless risks with flu

germs may be spread by hands

Wash often with the toilet soap that removes germs as well as dirt

AGAIN flu threatens!

Once more health authorities are fighting it, calling for your cooperation, urging every precaution.

Seven protective measures against flu—listed at right—have been compiled by the Life Extension Institute. Study these rules carefully. Follow them all — especially rule No. 2 about keeping hands germ free. The simplest rule of all — yet one of the most important.

DOOR KNOBS—touched by so many hands—are a favorite lurking-place for germs

For your hands are continually coming in contact with germ-laden objects—car-straps, banisters, door knobs, public telephones, money—and many more things that you and your children must touch.

And, since it is not yet certain exactly how influenza is spread, it is doubly important to do all you can to avoid it. Hands may carry it. Note statement of U. S. Public Health Service on how germs are spread by hands.

So, take this simple precaution and urge every member of your family to do the same. Wash hands oftener—always before eating and always with the toilet soap that removes germs as well as dirt.

The favorite toilet soap of millions purifies

Millions demand Lifebuoy for every toilet and bath purpose, just because they find it so refreshing, so cleansing, so safe for delicate skins, so effective in keeping away perspiration odor.

But Lifebuoy is far more than just a fine toilet soap. Its penetrating antiseptic lather removes germs as well as dirt.

Note its re-assuring hygienic scent

Scores of hands may have left germs on the PUBLIC TELEPHONE—you so unsuspectingly use

Lifebuoy's pleasantly hygienic, re-assuring scent, which vanishes as you rinse, tells you it gives greater protection. Yet Lifebuoy costs no more—probably less—than the soap you now use.

You can get Lifebuoy wherever soap is sold. Start using Lifebuoy today as a common sense health measure.

Don't fear flu —fight it these seven ways

Rules by LIFE EXTENSION INSTITUTE

1 Keep out of crowds all you can.
½ Remove germs from hands as often as possible.
3 Get plenty of rest, sleep, exercise, fresh air and nourishing food.
4 Avoid exposure to chill and wet, especially when tired.
5 Fortify yourself to resist the flu by having a health examination.
6 If you have the real flu don't take "home remedies"—call a doctor.
7 Be careful in convalescence. It is a danger period.

U.S. Public Health Service says:

"If a germ could talk, it would tell you that nothing pleases him more than to get a free ride from someone's soiled hands to some other person's mouth."
—U.S. Public Health Service Broadcast No. 96

Holiday Bills In Theaters Viewed and Reviewed By Critics

MELODRAMA AND FAIRY TALE IN UP-TO-DATE STYLE AT TWO THEATERS

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

MELODRAMA, but not of the old-fashioned sort, is on the boards at the Pitt Theater this week, where "The Trial of Mary Dugan" is attracting large holiday audiences. Some of these people are coming to see Bayard Veiller's play because they are interested in the fate of the charming young criminal; others are coming because they have heard that the charming young murderess is being impersonated by Ann Harding, and so they wish to help her escape the penalty.

"The Trial of Mary Dugan" should hardly be judged as a play. It is artfully contrived to give all the illusion of a case in court. It starts out early in the morning with the cleaning women removing the dust from the furniture; one of the hangers-on eats his noon-day sandwich in the court room during a recess; the tipstaves and clerks mutter their hocus-pocus and bite off the tails of their phrases; the judge looks terribly bored as he is trying to keep up an appearance of humane heart and superior wisdom.

It is just like a day in court, only there is no time wasted. In a play everybody must attend to business, because the audience wants to go home. In the courtroom nobody cares, because the public pays the bills.

All Forgiven Under Grill

The details of the crime for which Mary is arraigned are well known to everybody, and a solsister who is taking notes throughout the trial gives assurance that the public will be spared no pang. Ann Harding—we mean Mary—did look so sweet and helpless! That she had sold herself to provide money for her brother's education as a lawyer was all forgiven as she was grilled by that heartless bloodhound, Arthur Hohl—we mean the district attorney. We of the jury—for the entire audience is the jury—knew she could never have murdered her lover, no matter how black things looked for her. And when Robert Williams—we mean Jimmy, her brother—showed up as a real attorney and took Mary Ann's defense in hand, we knew she would be triumphantly acquitted, no matter how much Arthur Hohl might snarl and sneer. It was only a question who was guilty, and we were ready to convict either the district attorney or the judge on the bench, if they had been left-handed.

From all this it will be easy to judge the play. It is great melodrama and fairly good law. There are a good many very convenient coincidences to help Jimmy win his case, and there are more leading questions permitted than most lawyers would attempt or most judges tolerate, but what of that? We have seen poetic justice done once again; the grand old principle of stage jurisprudence, that a demure and unhappy blonde cannot be guilty, has once more been vindicated. And we have laughed at all sorts of witnesses, the lisping chorus lady, the effusive French maid, the chocolate-hued janitor, the Hibernian police inspector, and the very impressive tailor's dummy used to illustrate the murder.

This thrilling trial is acted by a very splendid aggregation of actors—the original New York cast, with the exception of one member who has died. Most of the hard work falls on Arthur Hohl, a Pittsburgh boy whose cleverness his fellow townsmen have their first opportunity to admire. As the merciless prosecutor, cynical and suave when not showing his fangs, he is masterful. The great emotional stress of the play, of course, falls on Ann Harding, who is every inch the broken heroine, shrinking and sweet and appealing in her distress. Her characterization is always admirable and convincing. The third of the principals is Jimmy, played by Robert Williams, with the awkward sincerity that is required to make the part quite credible. Fine work is also done by Rosa Powers, Michelette Burani, Merle Maddern, Leona Maricle, Georgia Decker, Nina Penn, Cyril Keightley, Charles Edwards, Robert Cummings and Oscar Polk.

The atmosphere throughout is perfect. We are certain that even the ice water in the cooler at one side of the court room is stale as it is in a real court. The only thing missing is the placid stupidity that drags real trials out day after day, week after week. If Shakespeare had been present at "The Trial of Mary Dugan," he would have taken back the mean slur he flings at "the law's delay."

Musical Bill Alvin Show

LIKE some new-fashioned fairy tale, "The Five-o-Clock Girl" at the Alvin Theater filled the Christmas Day with Christmas spirit, for this musical comedy is the real thing, Cinderella and Prince Charming up-to-date, with catchy music, tripping dances, extravagant costumes, beautiful scenery, and comedy of the most uproarious sort. And in the midst of all this, taking a prominent part in all of it, is pretty Mary Eaton, who shares with Marylin Miller the admiration of Americans with eyes and ears.

Every afternoon at 5 o'clock Patricia Brown, working in the Snow Flake cleaning shop, calls up the rich and aristocratic Gerald Brooks, who falls in love with her telephone voice. His valet at the same time is making love to Susan Snow, pretending to be a gentleman of high degree. They all meet at a party, after Patricia has won a beauty prize and become a modiste's model, and after many misunderstandings and adventures everything is straightened out and everybody is happy at the church door.

All Modern Fairy Tale

Quite a modern fairy tale, concocted by Guy Bolton and Fred Thompson, who have kept their story well in hand despite all the comedians and dancers whose specialties had to be dovetailed in. Among these are Shaw and Lee, those Hebrew comedians whose dumb scene is one of the funniest things in a show full of funny things. Among these is Pert Kelton's mock Spanish song and dance, with her red bull's tongue shawl.

The hero is portrayed by Oscar Shaw, who has a romantic voice and a distinguished manner, just as a modern Prince Charming should have. His singing of "Up in the Clouds," "Thinking of You," and other catchy numbers with Mary Eaton turned the audience into clamorous Oliver Twists.

The lyrics, for which Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby are responsible, have considerable melodic and rhythmic charm, and those that are humorous are richly humorous. Shaw and Lee have several of these with Pert Kelton—"Following in Father's Footsteps" and "Society Ladder"—that are capital and seem all too short. Jack Norton as the valet is another comedian who elicits gales of mirth with his "Am I Right or Am I right?" And Danny Dare gets in some remarkable dancing before the final curtain drops.

It is as coherent, tuneful and colorful a musical comedy as any one could ask for. Mary Eaton is a joy to behold and listen to. Oscar Shaw is the embodiment of romance as romance still goes in a cold and disillusioned world. So the whole entertainment fits into Christmas week like a happy echo of the days when the late Mr. Santa Claus still brought the children Grimm's Tales instead of a saxophone. Eye and ear and the young heart will get their wishes at the Alvin in following the fortunes of the Five-o-Clock Girl.

Good Bill In Stanley

A pleasing holiday bill is presented in the Stanley, where Milton Sills, in "The Barker," and a delightful little stage presentation, "Toyland," are the features. "The Barker," with talk sequences, is one of the best things Sills has done, but he receives strong support from Dorothy Mackaill and Betty Compson, as carnival girls, and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as the son of a carnival announcer—"barker"—the role played by Sills. The star puts power into his picture of wrath and disappointment as the son, destined by his father for a career far above his own, takes as his bride the carnival performer played well by Miss Mackaill. Miss Compson, as a grass skirt dancer, also is effective. "Toyland" blends into the "March of the Toys" overture as the curtains part to disclose a Christmas tree with groups of youngsters around it. From the "Wooden Soldiers" march to the finale by girls representing Santa Claus and his reindeer in a ballet it is well done, introducing some talented little artists in an atmosphere of Yuletide.

Aldine Bill Has Comedy

The screen of the Aldine this week talks and laughs right back at you, accompanying its mirthful chatter with a whimsical jumble of funny scenes depicting first-class holiday comedy. Now that the talkies have reached a stage of perfection, the movie comedy now loses not a whit of its force, but in most cases has a piquancy that is not possible in the silent picture. Just how funny a comedy can be when exemplified and amplified through the talkies is shown in a piece called "Brotherly Love," a collegiate travesty, which is the big picture in the Aldine's offering. It stars Karl Dane and George K. Arthur and stars them well. Other sound pictures are on the bill, including a sketch by Van and Schenck and the Cocoanut Grove orchestra, whose trombones seem to leap right out of the silver and the saxaphones drop their notes amidst the flickers and shadows. A movietone news reel completes the bill.

Girls, Fun In Academy

There is comedy, music and girls in Jack Reid's "Record Breakers," burlesque in the Academy. Elsie Raynor introduces specialties including a Persian idol dance, Juanita Evans and Sylvia Foreman sing excellently, while Ed. Jordan, Dave Burt and Bert Roberts appear in travesties. Jack Reid is seen in his original character "The Information Kid." Jimmy Pinto and his jazz kings, present a musical and dance specialty. Cleora, offers Oriental dances. Betty June Lee and her 10 dancing dolls complete the bill.

ARTISTS APPEARING :-: IN PLAYHOUSES :-: IN CURRENT PROGRAMS

Anne Pritchard, featured in Ned Wayburn's "Gambols," attraction in Nixon, a revue.

Ann Harding plays the leading role in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," drama in the Pitt.

Oscar Shaw has a principal role in "The Five O'clock Girl," Alvin musical comedy.

Dorothy Mackaill plays a carnival girl in "The Barker," vocal film in the Stanley.

Joan Crawford portrays a gypsy lass in "Dreams of Love," showing on screen in Penn.

2-A-DAY WINS NEW FAVOR IN DAVIS

An old-time all-vaudeville bill is on the boards at the Davis Theater this week, and at once caught on with the public—no wonder, for the nine acts on the bill are of very high grade. Of course the prime favorites are the Watson Sisters, who are as full of fun as ever—there is even solace in being fat if you can get so much amusement out of it. Artistically the best thing in the bill is Rosita Moreno, a Spanish dancer of exquisite grace and charm. She is so lovely to look at, she sparkles so vivaciously, that one almost forgets the two other clever members of the family and the Spanish orchestra that furnishes the accompaniment for their songs and dances. Another act is of startling nature, for the falls of Pete Michon almost require gutta-percha bones, and Joe swallowing his brother's head is a fine optical illusion. There is a one-act playlet, "The Third Door," in which Francis X. Bushman, Jr., and his sister, Lenore, appear. The act is feeble and silly and the young people struggle and rush around hopelessly trying to extract fun from it. The O'Brien Sisters are a fast-stepping dance team, Cy Landry has an assortment of spoken jokes this time, Florence Brady sings "Showboat" and other ballads with southern spirit, and three aerial stars shoot daringly through the atmosphere. The last number on the program also turns out to be one of the best. The Rigoletto Brothers, assisted by the Swanson Sisters, start off as if they were going to give a performance of magic, but they sing and dance, they juggle and cut capers, they are a vaudeville show by themselves, with a bit of circus thrown in. Altogether the reopening of the Davis as an old-fashioned two-a-day house of high-class vaudeville appears to be what the public wants, for nobody missed the picture, of which the only relic was the newsreel in which A. P. Moore welcomes Hoover to Peru.

Grand Film Is Realistic

Life on the waterfront of any large city is never quiet. Alternate laughs and thrills abound there, and it may be imagined that the doings on the docks of San Francisco are animated to the superlative degree. And it is not necessary to depend altogether on the imagination to vizualize what happens sometimes in the Golden Gate. It has been done into a realistic film story which is featured in the Grand. "Waterfront" is the graphic title of this colorful screen comedy of life on the docks and on shipboard on the Pacific. Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill are in the leading roles. The pictures have been synchronized with music by a very good orchestra and the scenes move with a lilt that is exhilarating. The news reel is up-to-date and of local interest because of several fine photographs of the $300,000 fire in Sharon, Pa., last week. A Vitaphone novelty picture completes the bill.

NEW REVUE IN NIXON PLEASES

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Ned Wayburn's "Gambols," in two acts embracing 28 scenes, certainly provides a quantity of entertainment — also variety. Incidentally, a change from the general run of amusement, being the first revue of the season. Besides quantity there is quality, especially in the dancing, for this is a show that is heavy on the side of the art of terpsichore, or, as the moderns have it, stepping. It is about the steppingest show ever, but, of course, being a revue, it has other ingredients, namely, comedy, in the shape of skits, and songs. Scenically it is not as ornate as some revues we have seen, but it decorative settings are appropriate to the trend of the production, and in good taste. Costuming is rich, the girls are not hard to look at, the comedians make one laugh, the singing pleases and the show, as a whole, is spectacular and immensely satisfying.

As dancing is stressed, let it be considered first. Anne Pritchard is featured and deserves to be. She is graceful in all her movements and is skilled in all styles of beautiful dancing, being especially adept in toe-dancing. Miss Pritchard is the leader in several ballets and other

Guarding Against the FLU

Any cold can mean the flu; the surest way to avoid flu is to avoid colds

To avoid coming down with a cold make prompt use of Bayer Aspirin.

Don't wait to see if that first sneeze or cough is going to be a cold. Take Bayer Aspirin at the first sign of any cold, and be safe.

And whatever you do, don't neglect a sore throat these days; gargle with Bayer Aspirin and remove the infection.

Guard against the flu by guarding against the colds that make you susceptible to the flu germs that lurk in crowded cars, public places, wherever there are people. Bayer Aspirin tablets are indispensable at such a time. Get the pocket box. Carry it with you.

Christmas Comes But Once a Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—(INS.)—A Christmas tree reigned in solitary splendor over the East room of the White House, even though there were no children, young or grown, to enjoy it. Mrs. Coolidge herself had the tree set up and personally trimmed it, in between the distribution of gifts for the Salvation Army and the Central Union Mission.

BETHLEHEM, Palestine, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—This little town of the Nativity was the scene of impressive services as thousands of tourists and natives visited it to partake in solemn Christmas celebrations.

GUTHRIE, Okla., Dec. 26.—"Uncle" Thomas Sloan celebrated his one hundred and sixteenth Christmas this year. It was also his one hundred and sixteenth birthday. More than a century in this world has convinced him it is a pretty good one after all.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Celebration of Christmas Day was not without a tinge of sadness in the South, yuletide tragedies having caused the death of 16 persons, eight of whom lost their lives in flames originated by apparently innocent explosions of fireworks.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Messages of Christmas greeting were sent to members of the Byrd Antarctic expedition from all parts of the world yesterday.

MEDIA, Pa., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Two pairs of little skates — Christmas presents from their father—brought death to Edward and Thomas Walters, 4 and 3, the sons of John Walters, a mill worker, in a mill dam near their home when they ventured onto thin ice.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Dec. 26.—Perhaps he used alligators to pull a boat in place of the sleigh and reindeers, but nevertheless, Santa Claus visited the hurricane-torn everglade country with gifts and a Christmas dinner for the sufferers in the autumn storm.

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Frank Shorzypek, Jr., 7, and his parents had narrow escapes when Frank decided to light the Christmas tree candles before others in the house were awakened. The tree caught fire.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—A six-day fight for speed in wintry seas and fog ended in victory when the liner Majestic arrived from Southampton in time for her 1,000 passengers to have their Christmas dinners ashore.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—After bringing home a turkey which he had roasted earlier in the day at his bakery, Granville Gracely, 48, of St. Clair, formerly of Allentown, dropped dead as he and his wife and five children were about to sit down to their Christmas dinner.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—With all members of his family about him for his last Christmas in the state executive mansion, Gov. Smith received presents from practically all sections of the United States.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Members of his family who went to call him for Christmas dinner found Thomas Fritz, 26, of Mahanoy City, dead in his room with a self-inflicted shotgun wound in his head.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Snow, as near the regulation article ever seen in this semi-tropical city, was Santa's present to St. Petersburg children. Local ice factories sent scores of truckloads of crisp white flakes to the beach, where it was spread in piles as boys and girls, attired in bathing suits, enjoyed a real snowball battle and made snow men. One youngster even trudged around with a sled.

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Vera Fay Warner, 4, was fatally injured in the downtown section when her father's machine collided with another automobile. Vera Fay's toys were strewn about the street.

Additional Stage and Screen News

ensembles and her art never fails to draw forth manifestations of approval. Olive McClure scores in dances of sinuous movement and her acrobatic dance is amazing. Frances Cole appears in an eccentric toe dance specialty. Shirley Richards and Garnet O'Brien also appear in solo dances that are pleasing exhibitions. The ensembles are performed by a group of well trained girls billed as The Promenaders.

An eccentric dance by Charles Elbey provided a great deal of amusement, this chap being an adept at grotesque stepping.

Charles Irwin heads the force of comedians, appearing as the debonair announcer and as a character in several of the skits. He introduces the show with droll references to what is to come and appears frequently to explain humorously what is to follow. Irwin is a real artist whose bright quips are a source of constant amusement. Lew Hearn, with his piping voice, also adds to the fun of the evening with his characterization of a "big" (Lew is about four feet in high-heeled shoes) butter and egg man and other types.

Boisterous comedy introduces the audience to Fuzzy Knight and it certainly is a happy and welcome introduction, as Fuzzy, at a little piano, sings, plays and clowns and sets the audience into an uproar of applause.

There is singing, of course, John Hyam and Grace Bowman, in the songs that introduce most of the spectacular features of the piece, doing their work in a way that pleases. Perhaps the most effective song is "Mothers of Men," a protest of war, sung dramatically by Rita Gould. Virginia Alexander and Garnet O'Brien also sing.

HARRIS FILM REALISM OF MINE

This reporter, who has been through the harrowing experiences of the greatest coal mine disasters in the Western Pennsylvania bituminous regions, left the Harris Theater yesterday with a sense of weariness and nervous shivers. What he had seen on the screen in the phototone picture "The Toilers" was so realistic that he felt as though he had witnessed the horrors of another underground catastrophe. All this speaks well for this unusual picture and the acting of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Jobyna Ralston, the stars, and the members of their excellent supporting company. In staging a coal mine explosion a few liberties must be taken with the technical side of the mining industry, but in the dramatic effects and the grim tragedy of such scenes, "The Toilers" is impressively true to life. Heading the vaudeville bill is Carrie Lillee, who sings character songs with brusque spirit. Dorothy Morley and Al Anger are leaders in the funmaking with a travesty on Western life. Others on the bill are up to the Harris standard.

Penn Show Has Midgets

Singer's Midgets, on the stage, in "Miniatures of 1928," and Joan Crawford and Nils Asther, on the screen, in "Dream of Love," provide the chief features of the holiday bill in the Penn. It is a program that gives pleasure and the stage presentation, especially, is in keeping with the season. The midgets give a little revue, in which the tiny performers offer specialties one sees on the vaudeville stage. They are fully as capable as artists of normal size and their program includes comedy and song and other features of a well-balanced bill, presented with special scenery and rich costuming. The photoplay presents Miss Crawford as a gypsy girl with whom a prince of a country in the hands of a dictator falls in love and must forget because of his position. Though she is not for him she is instrumental in having him put on the throne as king. Miss Crawford plays her part with much feeling. Nils Asther is a handsome prince. There are several elaborate scenes. The bill includes an overture appropriate to the season, organlogue, etc.

Acts, Film In Sheridan

The Christmas vaudeville and photoplays in the Sheridan Square is headed by Ada Brown in an act called "Southern Syncopation." Comedy is provided in a skit called "For No Good Reason," by a company of eight singers, dancers and funmakers. The photoplay feature is a comedy drama, "Power," with William Boyd and Jacqueline Logan in the stellar roles. It was filmed on the Pacoma Dam in California. Thomas and Johnston in a novelty offering and Roth and Drake in a song, dance and comedy act, organlogue by John Edward Mitchell and other attractions complete the bill.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Post-Christmas Festivities Scheduled

CHRISTMAS may be over and all the presents given and received, but that doesn't mean that there is any slackening in the rush of parties. No one could have asked for a more delightful Christmas Day, could he?—though there may be some hardy souls who would have preferred galoshing through snow. Few parties were scheduled for the holiday itself, but the intercollegiate ball in the William Penn Hotel last night attracted quite a throng of young people. On Christmas Eve, of course, there was the coming-out party of Margaret Holdship, a lovely affair in the Pittsburgh Club given by her father and mother, the Charles Frederick Holdships. Several small dinner parties preceded this ball.

Tonight, the Frank Scott Willocks, of Sewickley, are down on the social calendar for a dance in the Pittsburgh Club for their debutante daughter, Virginia. Before this party, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney A. Stewart and Mr. and Mrs. J. Shirley Austin are going to give a small dinner in the Stewart home in Northumberland street for their debutante sister, Marion Stone.

Then, tomorrow night is the radio ball in the William Penn Hotel, and there is little I need tell you about that. Let me repeat that the music and entertainment will all be broadcast, and the radio idea will be carried out in all the decorations.

I WANT to tell you, too, about some of the parties that are being arranged down in Sewickley. I understand that Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederic Byers, of Sewickley Heights, are planning to give a dinner on New Year's Eve for their young daughter, Nancy Lee. After dinner, the party will go to hear the Yale Glee Club concert.

Then for next Wednesday night is set the dinner which Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gundrey Jennings, of Irwin drive, Edgeworth, will give in the University Club for their daughter, Mary Colwell. And after that dinner, the young people will go to the Princeton Triangle Club play.

Still another dinner for the younger group will be held tomorrow night by Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Higgins, of Edgeworth, with their daughter, Elizabeth, as guest of honor. The dinner will precede the dance which Mr. and Mrs. J. Twing Brooks will give in the Allegheny Country Club for their daughter, Bertha. These two girls are home for the holidays, Elizabeth being a student at Oldfield's School, Glencoe, Md., and Bertha is a pupil at Miss Porter's School.

And on Saturday night, the Donald Thompsons, of Edgeworth, will entertain at dinner for their niece, Priscilla Pemberton, of Philadelphia. There will be about 60 guests and after the dinner the young folks will go on to the dance which Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Griffiths are giving for their daughter and son, Peggy and Paul Griffiths.

MRS. FRED B. KLEIBACKER, Mrs. Charles J. Graham, Mrs. A. J. Wurts, Mrs. Robert T. Rossell, Mrs. Edward A. Craig, Mrs. P. W. Morgan, Mrs. Thomas Ewing, Mrs. George S. Eaton, Mrs. Charles H. Curry, Mrs. George P. Rose, Mrs. Charles A. Fagan and Mrs. L. P. Scoville, are among the local women who are sponsoring the presentation of Galsworthy's "The Pigeon," which will be given January 4 in Carnegie Music Hall, by the Williams College Dramatic Club. Some of the others are Mrs. M. W. Acheson, Jr., Mrs. C. D. Rawstorne, Mrs. Ralph Longenecker, Mrs. Joseph Torrence Miller, Mrs. A. L. Humphrey, Mrs. Lawrence Litchfield, Mrs. Samuel Adams, Mrs. C. H. McKenna, Mrs. William Booth, Mrs. John F. Miller, rMs. A. L. Humphrey, Mrs. William F. Robeson and Mrs. William Ford.

THE new Keystone Athletic Club will open its new clubhouse on New Years Day with a dinner and dancing. The dinner will be served from 12 to 9 o'clock and there will be dancing from 3 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon and from 9:30 to 1 o'clock at night.

THE Highland Country Club will have its holidy party Friday night and is scheduled to be one of the biggest parties given by the club this year. The children's Christmas party will be held Saturday afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock. There will be a Christmas tree and gifts will be provided for the children of members.

THE annual dinner dance of the Trinity College alumnae will be held tonight in the Hotel Schenley. Miss Rosemary Hanlon is general chairman.

Woman's City Club Has Beautiful Tree

CHRISTMAS trees at the Woman's City Club have always been things of beauty, but this year's surpasses its predecessors. Tall and shapely, its stands in a silver bed in one corner of the living room, decorated only in "silver rain" and balls of glittering tinsel, and lighted from three sides by colored flood lights. There are wreaths in all the windows of the club rooms, holly and laurel on the ceiling and wall lights. Sideboard, china closet and serving table in the dining room bear a profusion of holly and the table is centered with a Jerusalem cherry plant, while red candles add their touch to the general gala effect. Each table in the tea room has its own bit of Christmas coloring and the wall lights are adorned with silver and red foliage.

PLANS have been completed for the annual New Year's ball of the Pittsburgh Club of Notre Dame, to be held next Tuesday night in the Pittsburgh Field Club. A feature will be the special dancing arrangement of two Notre Dame songs, "Victory March" and the "Hike Song." James Dodson, general chairman, is being assisted by a committee already named and also a special alumni committee.

PROCEEDS of the Junior Hadassah cabaret dance to be held this evening in Webster Hall will go to the Children's Village and the Nurses' Training School in Palestine.

MRS. ELBERT R. MOSES, of North Lincoln avenue, North Side, will be hostess for the annual Christmas party of the Westminster College Club, which will be an event of Friday afternoon.

* * *

STUDENTS home from college are guests today at the annual bridge luncheon being given by the Pittsburgh Holyoke Club in the Pittsburgh Country Club. Miss Virginia Rodgers heads the committee which also includes Mrs. Maurice D. Cooper, Miss Emily Irwin, Miss Janet Spice and Miss Josephine Coxe.

GRAFT CHARGES TO BE FILED MONDAY

Informations against 49 persons named in the presentment of the graft-probing county grand jury will be filed before several aldermen next Monday, District Attorney S. H. Gardner announced today, preferred, two charges being made against each of two defendants.

Obtaining addresses of the defendants and other details has delayed the filing of informations, Gardner explained.

A reasonable time will be given for the persons named to come forward and post bond before arrests will be made on the warrants issued by the aldermen. Early next month the grand jury will take up the matter of indicting those named in the information. After the indictments have been returned, the District Attorney probably will set an arraignment day and dates for the trials will be agreed upon.

When the latest batch of indictments have been returned there will be a total of about 230, and of this number Gardner believes that only one-half will be tried in court, the other charges being disposed of by pleas of guilty.

BEGIN WORK ON TRAFFIC LIGHTS

Erection of the synchronized electric traffic control system for downtown Pittsburgh was started today by the Duquesne Light Company. Ground was broken for the first cable installations at Ninth street and Duquesne way and at Penn avenue and Water street.

Plans have been worked out at conferences between William Shore, Jr., utilities engineer, B. W. Marsh and C. S. Cunningham, of the Bureau of Traffic Planning and representatives of the Duquesne Light Company, by which most of the work will be done at night.

500 at Dinner Given To 'Down-and-Outers'

A turkey dinner was served more than 500 persons yesterday at the second annual dinner for "down-and-outers" held by Strip politicians at 2710 Penn avenue. A committee headed by Congressman-elect P. J. Sullivan was in charge. While the meal was being served another committee distributed clothing and food to needy families in the district.

MISS SEABURY BETROTHED

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—The engagement of Miss Muriel Gurdon Seabury to William White Howells, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Meads Howells, was announced last night by Miss Seabury's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Marston Seabury.

Miss Seabury, a debutante of this season, is a descendant of Samuel Seabury, who was consecrated bishop of Connecticut in Aberdeen, Scotland, November 14, 1784, and numbers among her ancestors three New England governors. She is a graduate of the Chapin School and is a provisional member of the Junior League.

Mr. Howells is a grandson of the late William Dean Howells, dean of the American literary world during the early part of this century. He also is a grandson of Horace White, who served as editor of the Chicago Tribune and the New York Evening Post. His father is well known as an architect here and in Chicago. Howells is a graduate of St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and is a senior at Harvard University.

HANGS ON TAXICAB TIRE SPYING ON WIFE; JAILED

The sleuth methods of H. F. Hankey, 35, of 1210 Allegheny avenue, in spying on his estranged wife, were too brazen, Hankey, crouching on a spare tire of a taxicab as it was being driven in Penn avenue, East Liberty, last night, was arrested along with his wife, Lillian, of 107 Forty-sixth street, and Edwin Coll, 8001 Conemaugh street, who were inside.

Hankey testified in Morals Court today that he was following his wife from whom he had been separated for seven months, and Coll, from a movie theater, when arrested. Mrs. Hankey testified she had been compelled to leave Hankey as he gambled and was unable to support her. She was ill and Coll was taking her home from the theater, she said. Magistrate A. D. Brandon discharged the three.

MERRY FOR "NEWSIES"

SCHENCK VAN

Here are Van and Schenck, famous vaudevillians, who are doing their bit in bringing Christmas cheer to 5,000 Sun-Telegraph newsboys at Loew's Aldine Theater this week.

CHRISTMAS TREAT GIVES NEWSIES TIME OF LIVES

The business manager of The Sun-Telegraph and J. A. Simons, manager of Loew's Aldine Theater, are not be-whiskered gentlemen like Santa Claus, but just the same they are giving thousands of Pittsburgh newsboys a holiday treat this week that even the merry old Christmas saint would be proud to give.

Instead of candy to tickle their palates, or toys to gladden their hearts, the Christmas cheer these gentlemen are providing for "newsies" is in the form of a mammoth four-day theater party at Loew's Aldine Theater.

More than 1,000 youthful vendors of The Sun-Telegraph crowded into the theater Monday for the first day's entertainment. Mr. Simons, an old newspaperman, who knows just what kind of a show "newsies" enjoy, gave the youngsters a two-and-a-half-hour entertainment that will long linger in their memories. From the moment when the first scene was flashed on the screen of the Aldine until the last flicker, the newsboy audience roared with laughter.

Karl Dane, as the hard-boiled prison guard, and George K. Arthur, as the beauty parlor manager, in "Brotherly Love," scored the biggest hit. One boy was so exhausted from laughter that it took three glasses of water to revive him.

THREE MORE SHOWS

The merriment continued with Van and Schenck in the Metro Movietone, "Singing Songs as You Like Them." Val and Ernie Stanton, in their comedy and song act, "English as She Is Not Spoken," did their share to make the entertainment a capital success. When, as the closing feature, Gus Arnheim and his Cocoanut Grove Orchestra played a medley of syncopation, it was with difficulty that the boys realized the show was at an end and that it was time to get busy to sell the next edition of The Sun-Telegraph.

The same program is being given this morning, and will be repeated tomorrow and Friday. Pink tickets only are good for admission today, white for tomorrow and yellow for Friday. They can be obtained through the circulation department of The Sun-Telegraph and all news dealers.

Quick Relief for COLDS since 1889

When epidemics strike

In small towns and large; when colds, grip, and influenza reach epidemic proportions; practically every druggist's stock of GROVE'S BROMO QUININE is cleaned out. The demand for GROVE'S reaches such volume that drug stores telegraph for air-mail shipments from our laboratories.

What a pity that many people need so drastic a warning as an epidemic to make them take care of their colds promptly and vigorously! How much saner and safer, to take GROVE'S BROMO QUININE whenever the onset of any cold is felt, in epidemic time or not.

Mildly Laxative, the tiny tablets clean the digestive tract. The tonic benefits build up the body's defenses. Thus the cold is frequently nipped while it merely threatens. Or it is thrown off quickly.... There are two precautions: First, immediate treatment. Second, the right treatment. Therefore, emphasize GROVE'S, when asking for GROVE'S BROMO QUININE. Price 30c.

Weather Conditions.

High barometric pressure overlies the Atlantic Coast states, and the Rocky Mountain states, and low pressure occupies the central valleys and the plains, with its center over Minnesota and Western Ontario. This distribution of pressure is producing clear skies, generally, except over the Northern Rocky Mountain states and the North Pacific Coast states. The precipitation was light and was limited to along the North Pacific coast, light snow over Idaho and Wyoming, sprinkles of rain in South Dakota and Western Iowa, and showers at Norfolk and Hatteras.

Mild temperatures prevail everywhere, and no cold weather is indicated for the next few days.

River Conditions.

"BAUMES LAW" FOR PENNSYLVANIA FAVORED

Should Pennsylvania Have a Baumes Law?

SENATOR CALEB BAUMES
Senator Baumes is the man who originated the New York state law by which habitual offenders can be confined for life.

JOHN MONAGHAN
Monaghan, district attorney for Philadelphia county, has prompted introduction of a Baumes law for Pennsylvania in the next Legislature.

SAMUEL H. GARDNER
Allegheny county's district attorney does not approve of the proposed law. He is against too severe punishment for offenders he must prosecute.

STANLEY ASHE
Warden Ashe, who governs many of society's derelicts at the Western Penitentiary, is in favor of life confinement for habitual criminals.

STATUTE NOT TOO HARSH URGED

Inquiry among police and prison authorities today disclosed strong sentiment in favor of life imprisonment in Pennsylvania for criminals convicted of felony for the fourth time. Approval was given the bill, modeled after New York's famous Baumes law, to be introduced in the Legislature next month at the instance of District Attorney John Monaghan, of Philadelphia.

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner dissented, however, on the ground that all felonies in the code are not "high-grade" crimes, and that consequently the proposed law would make it necessary to sentence to life imprisonment persons who might have been guilty of what were really only petty offenses. Gardner said he won the District Attorneys' Association of Pennsylvania to his view that the imposition of life imprisonment should be discretionary with the court.

Following are the opinions expressed by the persons interviewed:

MICHIGAN LAW OPPOSED

Inspector Frank R. Boyd, chief of detectives, Pittsburgh Bureau of Police: "Life imprisonment on conviction of a felony for the fourth time would be a dandy law — provided the felony was always a real crime. New York and Michigan have such laws, but in Michigan violation of the liquor law is a felony, and it is a sad thing to see a person sentenced to life imprisonment for booze."

John McNeil, warden of the Allegheny county jail: "A law such as that proposed should have a deterrent effect on habitual criminals. A man who has been convicted of a felony for the fourth time is a hopeless case. There is no likelihood of his reforming. The local parole records, I was told recently, show that 40 per cent of the prisoners paroled violate the terms of their parole and are recommitted to prison. That seems to show the advisability of keeping confirmed and habitual criminals under constant restraint."

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner: "Larceny is a felony in Pennsylvania, wife desertion is a felony in Ohio, and violating the liquor law is a felony in Michigan. A man might commit a petty theft in Pennsylvania, desert his wife in Ohio, sell a pint of whisky in Michigan, and then come back to Pennsylvania and steal a loaf of bread. If we had a Baumes law here, the judge would have no alternative but to sentence the man to life imprisonment. I am opposed to any law that takes away the discretionary power of the court. Let us have an increasing penalty for each recurring offense, and let it be life imprisonment for the fourth conviction if the court decides that life imprisonment is the proper sentence. But let us not make it compulsory."

WOMAN GIVES APPROVAL

Mrs. Florence Dibert, of Johnstown, for six years vice president and a member of the board of managers of the State Industrial Home for Women at Muncy: "I am very decidedly in favor of the proposed law, and it should apply to women the same as men. I have long been interested in prison problems and criminology, and my study has convinced me that a person who has been convicted of a felony for the fourth time is no longer to be trusted at large."

Stanley P. Ashe, warden of the Western Penitentiary: "I believe an habitual criminal should be incarcerated permanently, and I feel that when a person has been convicted of a felony for the fourth time it may be considered pretty good evidence that he is an habitual criminal."

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

IF MY memory for dates doesn't fail me again, this is the first anniversary of the Sidewalks of Pittsburgh. Just a year ago I discontinued a daily column on the sport pages to take up this kind of work. I am taking the chance that you might be interested in the autobiography of a column still in long clothes at the age of one year.

There is a vast difference between a column of this kind and a column of sports. This sort of column is much more difficult, I believe, and added to that is the fact that unconsciously over a period of 10 or 12 years I acquired the technique of a sports column, while in starting this column I had no knowledge by study or experience of its mechanics. And about all work of this kind there is a technique and there are mechanics, even if they have never been set down in books of instruction.

* * *

IN a sports column there are certain stencils, on which a writer may fall back. Well, I'll qualify that by saying there are stencils which I fell back on. On a dull day when the muse was not working, such subjects as Ruth, Dempsey, Bobby Jones, Tilden and Tunney came to mind, and he is a dull man, indeed, who cannot provide several paragraphs from the suggestions that come automatically from such contemporaries in the field of sportive action.

* * *

There were other tricks of that trade, too, that came naturally after long practice. A sports writer is usually given wide latitude and on days when all subjects seemed pale, one could project a famous sport character into a strange field and get a topic. The fact, for instance, that Ruth got a stomach ache from eating fried potatoes at breakfast time allowed the columnist to digress to dieting in general and dieting in athletics in particular.

As a sports writer with some ideas on the theater it was only necessary to call attention to the fact that Ruth had taken to the stage and that was sufficient excuse for the sports writer to insinuate his theatrical prejudices in a column ordinarily devoted to sports. Once, as a sport writer, I managed to write a criticism of John Barrymore in "Hamlet" and I remember that well because that celebrated figure of the American stage was thoughtful enough to send to a lowly sports column his personal felicitations.

IN FACT, it was likely my knavery in writing on favorite themes, quite apart from sports, that may have prompted a superior to suggest a column in which, almost anything within reasonable bounds and carrying some sort of Pittsburgh background, might be set forth. As a sport writer I had unwittingly built up the tradition that I often was less uninteresting in writing of affairs extraneous to sports than when writing sports.

I still have to learn the tricks of this column writing. After a year I can barely extract an ace from the coat sleeve, whereas there are probably hundreds of acts of columnar legerdemain mastered by the big magicians of the craft.

* * *

I DO find it is a little less difficult today than it was a year ago, but that is not altogether reassuring. It may be getting easier because I am growing worse. I wouldn't know about that. However, no one can say that I am like the White Sox of 1919, who deliberately threw the game. I at least am trying.

* * *

If I eventually fail it will be no one's fault but my own. I have had nothing but encouragement from associates and superiors. This all is entirely too personal, perhaps, but on an anniversary, and just after Christmas, I always get that way.

SCHOOLS GIVEN PAINTINGS

A copy of Raphael's famous painting, "A Madonna of the Chair," which hangs in Florence, Italy, has been presented to each of the two grade schools and the high school of Bellevue by Mrs. Nellie E. Robertson, a member of the borough school board.

The pictures, 20 by 26 inches, are exact reproductions of the original and were obtained at Florence by Mrs. Robertson while touring Europe.

The pageant was presented in dialogue form with Miss Florence E. Tipper, 3648 Brighton road, representing an angel, and Dr. Krause, invisible, the "Voice of Mankind." Three candles represented "Truth, Godliness and Beauty," and a child portrayed the Babe of Bethlehem sent to reveal the final will of God to man. Mrs. Bertha King, played organ accompaniments. The pageant was a feature of a sunrise Christmas service beginning at 6:15 a. m.

GRADE PUPILS AID POOR

Many destitute children were made happier yesterday because of activities of pupils of Bellevue public schools. Eighth grade pupils filled 150 Christmas stockings for the Red Cross. Girls of Seventh and Eighth grades dressed 90 dolls for the Toy Mission and contributed $59.75 to provide Christmas dinners for the unfortunate.

McKees Rocks Suicide Motive Yet Unsolved

HOLIDAY LIQUOR DRINKING ENDS IN SLAYING

Holiday liquor drinking, climaxed by an argument in the home of Charles Ferrack, 32, at 242½ Beech way, Homestead, police say, led to the killing by a bullet through the heart of Elia Ragy, 35, of 1307 Louise street, Munhall, last night. Homestead police arrested Ferack and two alleged witnesses.

The victim, according to deputy coroners, had been in the Ferack home but a short time when an argument ensued. Ferack, police allege, drew a .38 caliber revolver and fired once, the bullet striking Ragy, a millworker, in the heart. Mike Prodan, 34, of 329 Cherry way, and George Thoma, 32, of 316 Fourth avenue, both of Homestead, who, police say, witnessed the slaying, were arrested.

Authorities learned that Ragy had spent Christmas Day drinking but were unable to tell what led to the fatal shooting. Powder burns on the man's clothing and chest indicated that he was shot at close range.

Ferack will be turned over to the coroner, police announced.

"Soft Drink" Store Brings $100 Fine

Carl Stofaski, 37, proprietor of a confectionery store at 146 South Seventeenth street, was fined $100 by Magistrate John J. Sweeney in the South Side Police Court on a charge of keeping a disorderly house.

Stofaski's store was raided by Capt. Dennis Hennessy's squad from the South Side Station. A small quantity of moonshine liquor and home brew was confiscated, police said. John Lewiki, 27, of the same address, arrested on a charge of visiting a disorderly house, was discharged by the magistrate.

Liquor Plentiful In Ireland, Saw No Drunks

There is no prohibition in Ireland, and I did not see any drunks there, declared Robert Martin, of 929 Kirkbride street, North Side, who has just returned from Belfast, where he met his brother for the first time in 40 years. Martin recounted that when they met they failed to recognize each other.

He noted a great many improvements in his native city since he came to this country 40 year ago.

"The standard of living and wages are much higher," he said. "Many large firms pension their employees after certain ages, and the people, in general, seem to be very happy."

WOMEN SEEK CLEAN STREETS

A campaign for cleaner streets in Wilkinsburg has been launched by the Woman's Civic Club of that borough, which has adopted for its motto "Our City Beautiful."

To keep waste paper and similar refuse off the streets, the club has appealed to the borough council and the street commissioner, William Ewing, that waste paper receptacles be placed at all schools with candy stores nearby and at all street intersections. School principals also will be asked to urge upon pupils the advantages of cleanliness and to explain the uses of the receptacles.

In addition the Young Women's Group gave a sum of money to the Associated Charities to aid needy families and the Young Women's Missionary Society sent gifts of clothing to the mountaineers at Shelton, Tenn.

NEW PASTOR HERE FEB. 1

The Rev. Owen W. Pratt, of Mt. Vernon, Ill., who recently accepted a call to the Ben Avon Presbyterian Church, will take charge February 1, he has notified the session. His coming has been delayed by injuries suffered by Mrs. Pratt in an automobile accident in St. Louis. Her pelvic bone was fractured and she will be in a hospital for another month. Upon her recovery the family, consisting of the parents and a 5-year-old daughter will move to Ben Avon. The Rev. Dr. John Gaston, of the National Board of Missions, has been supplying the pulpit in December. Next month the Rev. Dr. Selby F. Vance will preach.

Aunt Roxy Says

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 26.

Well, the Christmas spirit is over now. Everybody can get back to their natural dispositions.

If there had been as many good wishes in the heart as there was on paper, the devil would have to dig up some new clients.

Christmas will never be a real charity benefit till we learn to eat those Christmas cards.

If we spent as much with the Salvation Army as we do with the telegraph companies every Christmas, why the poor would be fat all winter.

But we can all go back to work with a clear conscience. We fed 'em Christmas and New Years. Now all the poor have to do is just to fill in the few meals till next Christmas.

Yours, Will.

Madge Saves Celeste's Life After She Is Bitten By a Snake

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Madge Sayre, pretty and young, craves luxuries of life. She meets handsome Carroll Dudley, artist and aviator and "man about town," at a party given by Frances Storrs, a friend. Frances warns Madge against Dudley's professions of love. She dines in his luxurious studio apartment, takes midnight air rides in his plane and accepts his suggestion to pose for him in the nude. After professing his love for her, which she accepts, it develops that he is already married. She is struck by the automobile of Michael Winchester, who falls in love with her. They are married. The event is one of startling magnificence. Madge had previously described to Michael her affair with Dudley. Later a barrier of misunderstanding which neither is able to surmount arises. Michael receives a cable to go to his sister in England. He fails to ask Madge to accompany him. Shortly after in a darkened theater a man takes the seat next to her. "Ecstacy! Ecstacy!" he whispers. It is Dudley's pet name for her. Refusing to be jilted by her coldness, Dudley forces her to ride with him through the park. An agreement is reached based solely on "friendship." She invites him to dinner. She deserts Michael and goes to Carroll. Michael is heartbroken when he discovers Madge has left him. Michael plans a trip to Africa in order that he might forget her. Madge is again deceived by Carroll and makes up her mind that she is through with him. Madge realizes now that she loves Michael and mistook thrills for love.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE ensuing seconds were afterward very vague in Madge's memory. Instantly she was it—the coiled horror that was now sliding away into the underbrush; Celeste, white and terrified, rolled up on the path, grasping the little calf of her limb.

Madge sprang to action. There was no time for anything else. Somewhere she had read or heard what to do, and there was the sharp knife in her hand.

She knelt by the child, paused only long enough to see the puncture made by the rattler's fangs, and then, carefully steeling her nerves, she cut with her knife—cut twice, as Celeste screamed.

Madge could not even utter one word of comfort. Her lips had other things to do. Fighting down the nausea that the act entailed, Madge applied her mouth to the wound, and began to suck out the poison, carefully spitting out what she drew in.

It was thus the agonized mother and the frightened Ethel found her when they ran to the spot.

Madge did not stop. She went on at her loathsome task, lost to all thought save that of the child's life.

And when at last it was over, while Martha wept and Ethel trembled, it was Madge who took charge of the situation. She turned to Ethel:

"Run ahead of us!" she ordered, as she twisted her belt above the wound on the child's leg. "Telephone for a doctor and tell him to hustle. And you, Martha," she went on as Ethel sped down the path, "go on and get antiseptic gauze ready. Pull yourself together—I believe Celeste will be all right. I think I got her in time."

The note of command in Madge's voice caused the heart-broken mother to obey, while Madge, picking Celeste up in her arms, went as quickly as she could toward the house.

There followed nearly an hour of tortured suspense before the arrival of the doctor. The father's agitation was something dreadful to witness. Again it was Madge who took charge of the cleansing and sterilizing the wound and she only relinquished her duties when the doctor ran his car into the house.

Almost worse was to come when the doctor, after a brief examination, cauterized the wound. How infinitely would Madge have preferred to bear the physical pain herself than to witness the suffering of little Celeste.

But even that was over at last, and the doctor turned and shook hands with Madge. He addressed the relieved parents:

"You must thank this brave young lady for the fact that your child will live," he said. "It is owing to her promptness and to her sucking out of the poison that your little one will be as well as ever as soon as the pain of the burn leaves her. Nothing could have been more efficient, and of her courage I cannot say enough."

Now that it was over, particularly considering all she had gone through that day, Madge felt faint. She had caught at a chair to steady herself, and Martha presently helped her upstairs.

Then as Madge lay on her bed, Martha tried to tell her something of the gratitude that was in her heart.

"Henry and I can never forget—never begin to thank you," she began, but she broke down and her tears said more than any words could have conveyed.

And later, after Madge had rested and felt stronger, Henry sought her out as he expressed what he felt towards the girl whose pluck and promptness had saved his darling's life.

"I'm not one to talk much," Henry finished, "but if ever you need a friend, Mrs. Dudley, I hope you know where to look."

Madge went slowly out to a hammock swung between two trees at the side of the house. How she hated it that these honest people should know her as Mrs. Dudley." She must deny herself even the warmth of their friendship. If they knew what she had done, would they feel the same way towards her? These simple people knew a simple code, and the betrayal of a man such as Michael could earn from them only stern disapproval.

Martha approached the hammock as the evening shadows began to fall.

"The child's much better, but she's asking for you," she said. "I've explained to her just what you did, and she wants to kiss you."

"The darling!" Madge exclaimed tenderly. "I'll go right up."

She found Celeste in bed and knelt down beside her. Childish arms went about her neck, and sweet child kisses caressed her cheek. Madge felt that she could not control the surge of sadness that went through her.

"Tell me a story!" came the oft-repeated request. "Madge, tell me a story, 'cause I've been a sick little girl."

Madge sat down on a chair, and suddenly she knew the story she would tell.

"Once upon a time," Madge began in the approved style, for all stories for children must begin that way; but as she went on she seemed unconscious of the rapt little listener who lay as still as a mouse and never interrupted with a word until the end.

After many exciting details she went on:

"And when the Glittering Dragon, who was all the colors of the rainbow so that the Foolish Princess thought he was just wonderful, this marvelous Dragon who flew so swiftly through the skies, finally got the Princess to let him carry her away from the Kind and Chivalrous Prince, she thought that she was going to be happy ever afterwards."

Madge paused as though that were the end of the story, when all the world knows that they just had to live happily ever afterwards!

"But," protested Celeste, as though Madge had failed utterly as a story teller, "what happened then? What happened to the Kind and Chivalrous Prince?"

"I was afraid you wouldn't like the story," Madge faltered. "Now I come to think of it, I don't like the story myself. You see, the Glittering Dragon just dropped the Foolish Princess on a desert island and then flew away leaving her to her tears. As for the Kind and Chivalrous Prince, why he—I guess—soon forgot all about the Foolish Princess and went away in a ship, like the one you cut out of the newspaper—and that is really the end of the story."

"I don't like it a bit!" Celeste criticized it with all the honesty of her six years. "Thank you very much, Madge, but I like Ali Baba, and the Forty Thieves, or Cinderella, ever so much better."

Martha came in, and after a good-night kiss, Madge strolled away to her own room, leaving the mother with the child.

"I hope you let Madge know how grateful you are for saving your life," Martha was saying as Madge left the room.

But Celeste was much too interested in the story to talk about gratitude. She insisted upon repeating it for her mother's benefit, remembering very clearly every detail.

"So I told her it wasn't a nice story, Mummie," she continued. "I don't like to think of the poor, Foolish Princess without the Kind and Chivalrous Prince, because it was all the fault of that old Glittering Dragon, even if he did fly so beautifully!"

Martha had listened carefully. Suddenly she smiled.

"Go to sleep, my darling," she said, fondly, "but I have an idea—Celeste. Mummie thinks that perhaps after all—partly through you, darling—that Mummie will be able to help Madge."

"How, help?" Celeste wanted to know.

"Oh, in lots of ways," Martha answered, kissing her.

She tapped on Madge's door.

"Come in," Madge called, sadly. She was sitting by the open window, watching the sunset.

"Everything's upset, and supper will be later," Martha explained. She hesitated. "May I sit down?"

The Tease -:- -:- By Truda Dahl

© 1928, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved.

OH, WHAT a tease! She's deliberately teasing the poor man until he doesn't know what to do! And she'll be sorry, too! Because love can stand just SO much teasing, and then—well, sometimes it turns out quite differently to what one would expect. But in this gay holiday season the temptation is so great that one cannot resist the impulse to tease just the tiniest bit.

Some girls even go so far as to wear a garland of mistletoe and dare everyone who comes near them to accept the challenge. And some not quite so daring, carry a bit with them, and you hear on all sides, "Don't you wish it were over my head?" She knows he does, but she can't resist teasing him a bit. But wait! He'll bide his time and the second she stands under the magic branch, she's gone. He'll claim the forfeit she has so tantalizingly withheld from him. And one more pair will be started on the road to Love and Happiness!

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Discover Symptoms of Illness Early

IN an address recently, Dr. Lewellyn F. Barker, president of the Inter-State Post Graduate Medical Association of North America, discussed the causes for the increase in the average span of life. He recites four chief reasons, as follows:

DR. COPELAND

"Endowments of clinics to discover causes of disease.

"Attraction of greater numbers of young men of ability to this work.

"Rise in the average level of training among practicing physicians, and

"Periodic health examination."

If I were in the mood to argue the case I might dispute some of the inferences of these statements. The particular thing in my mind is the possibility that there may be implied a criticism of the older practioners.

Of course, Dr. Barker did not intend this. Unboubtedly a full report, instead of the brief one I read, would define more clearly that the writer was pleading the importance of frequent and careful health examinations.

He was pointing out how such examinations are made possible even for the poor. The clinics, the willingness of young medical men with time on their hands to attend these clinics, and the increasing belief in the profession that frequent examinations are important—these have resulted in an extension of life's span.

When we study the statistics of long life, we find that the good results are confined largely to the extremes of life. Under modern conditions thousands of babies live who would have died under the conditions of one generation ago. In old age, too, we have learned how to prolong life.

Unfortunately, in the middle age group, disease is as prevalent and as fatal as it was 30 years ago. In this period of life the old time practitioners were and are just as successful as the men of recent medical training.

Believe me, these old time doctors possess the art of medicine, remarkable skill in applying methods for the relief of pain and the prolongation of life. They have knowledge that should be the envy of the young men in the profession. Let no recent graduate sneer at these "old-fashioned," "country" doctors.

When I am sick I want two doctors. One of them, the modern physician, will apply the latest scientific knowledge. The other, the old time family doctor, will know how to place his cool hand on my fevered wrist and brow. He will know how to arrange "hot packs," or "cold packs." He will have a bag full of wonderful tricks to command my confidence and relieve my pain.

My hat is off to the old time doctor. I respect and commend everything modern science has given the world. But I shall never forget the doctor of the old "Dr. MacClure" type. God bless him!

But Dr. Barker is right about the necessity for frequent physical examinations. I beg of you not to overlook their importance. Have your machinery overhauled occasionally. Early attention to the defects discovered in these surveys will preserve your body and prolong your life.

If you can't afford to pay the full fee for this important work, go to one of the splendidly equipped clinics. Here these trained and able men check up on your physical possessions. Follow the advice given you.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Ask For It

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please tell me if a lady is lunching or dining alone in a restaurant or club room whether it is correct when she rises before leaving to shove her chair in place again or not?

2. When dining with a gentleman should she give her order to the waiter herself or express to her escort what she wishes, and if the latter, when should she do so?

3. Also when dining with a gentleman and a lady wishes cream in her coffee or would like some bread should she wait until her friend passes them to her, or should she offer them to him, if he neglects to do so, and then help herself?

EMMY.

NO, she leaves the chair as it is. 2. She gives her order to her escort and he gives it, with his own, to the waiter. She gives her order when she has looked over the menu card and determined what she prefers.

3. If she wishes some cream or some bread or a service of any other item on the table (or not on the table, for that matter), she helps herself, if this is convenient, or asks her escort for it if she cannot conveniently reach it. By no means should she hesitate to ask for a detail of this kind. To ask for it shows her "accustomedness" to going about in the world.

Mother Is Arbiter

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper for a girl who has been going about with a boy friend two years to invite him to stay on Saturday nights when she wants him to? He does not live in the same city she does and it saves him a long trip. He stays about twice every month. If she is wrong will you please give her some advice as to what she should do? READER.

THE propriety of this depends on several things, but particularly on the degree of friendship and on the convenience of the girl's family and the home. Such frequent invitation as this would mean a quite "serious" friendship. A casual friendship would not admit of this invitation twice a month. The girl's mother is the real judge, in this case, and really no one but she could possibly pass judgment or give advice. The invitation should always be given by the girl's mother, the hostess of the home. And the girl shouldn't browbeat her mother into thinking that this twice-a-month visit is correct. This would mean much home-adjustment, and this falls on the mother.

Lillian Is Excited Because of Letter From Brixton

THERE was that in Lillian's face which made me turn away with the feeling that she would not wish even so old a friend as I to see what was written upon it. Unreasoning fear and loathing were in the gaze she was directing at one of the letters which just had been brought to her in the mail, and I marveled at her betrayal of emotion for her poise is usually unshakable. My wonder increased when she spoke, for her voice was faint and tremulous, unlike Lillian's crisp, clear accents.

"Madge!" Just my name and nothing more. But there was a direct appeal in the almost whispered word, and I wheeled swiftly and crossed to her.

"Yes, dear girl, what is it?"

She put up her hand and clasped mine so tightly that it was like the grip of a crippled person clutching at another for support.

"You believe in presentiments, don't you?" she asked.

For a wavering second I hesitated. She so plainly was waiting for an affirmative answer that I feared to give it and add to the mysterious terror which seemed to have her in its grip. But she knows me too well for either denial or evasion and I shamefacedly voiced a weakness of which she was well aware.

"Yes, I am that idiotic," I admitted, "or rather, the more foolish part of me is. My common sense tells me that what I think are presentiments, fulfilled are simply coincidences."

She made an impatient gesture. "Who is mentioning common sense?" she queried. "That has nothing to do with it. But I am on my knees to you for every time I've laughed when you've felt that something was going to happen. I'm paying for it now with loan shark interest."

She lifted the letter which had so queerly affected her and slapped it smartly across her palm.

"If I haven't lost my memory," she said, "this letter is from an old associate of—Tom's—who caused us a great deal of trouble. And I have the queerest feeling—I never experienced anything like it before—that something terrible is coming to me through him."

I could not keep the amazement from my eyes and voice. For Lillian, of all people, the sanest, most poised woman I know, to be affected in this way by the mere sight of a letter was unthinkable. The troublesome superstitious streak in my own mental make-up forced a query into my consciousness as to the possibility of some impending tragedy in Lillian's life being heralded by the inoffensive looking letter.

But I realized that I must give no hint of that terrified query to my friend. Instead I schooled my voice to matter-of-fact accents.

"I should think the quickest way to find out what is in the letter would be to read it," I commented.

She threw up her head, and I saw that I had aroused her, perhaps pricked the pride she always has had in her own poise.

"Thank you," she said with a touch of irony. "I'll just do that little thing. Will you excuse me?"

I responded to the perfunctory question with an equally conventional assent, and she slit open the envelope and taking out the letter it contained, unfolded the sheet and read it through. She had regained control of herself, and she gave no exclamation of surprise or any other feeling while her eyes traveled over the pages. But I knew by my infallible test, the deeper etching of the tiny lines around her mouth, that the contents of the letter were both amazing and disturbing.

She read it twice before laying it down, and then she looked off into space for a little and I guessed that the pages of memory were unrolling in kaleidoscopic fashion before her.

"Restitution!" she breathed at last. "Restitution from Samuel Brixton!"

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

Speaking of Men

A HUSBAND is like a photograph; some women succeed in getting a good one at the first try-out, but lots of women have to demand several retakes before they have any luck.

* * *

No man falls so hard for a woman, nowadays, that it breaks his heart or even strains his imagination.

Nothing arouses a man's interest in a play like a long queue in front of the box-office, and nothing makes him so eager to date a girl as the fact that he has to "stand in line" in order to do it.

* * *

A man is not actually middle-aged until the girls stop thinking of him as a "good pal" and begin thinking of him as a "good thing."

* * *

These days, a man takes for granted that a girl should be perfectly delighted with a part-time love and a sort of co-operative interest in his evenings.

A "man's woman" is one in whose credo cigaret ashes are good for the rugs, wet tumblers improve the mahogany, poker parties relax the nerves and home is a place with all the comforts of a club.

Breaking a man's heart is not cruel, but merely educational. A man's heart, like his teeth, has to be made to ACHE before he is conscious of its existence.

It is hard to tell whether it is more difficult to lure a man into a serious love-affair before marriage or to keep him out of one after marriage.

* * *

Platonic love may end in a wedding—but the most lasting kind is that which begins there.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Thursday, December 27

COMPLICATIONS, uncertainties and perplexities seem to be the state of affairs read from the fluctuating and afflicted sway of dominating planets. With Mercury under affliction there is menace of fraud, misrepresentation and trickery. All writings and agreements should be made with unusual precaution. Personal afflictions are likewise under adverse conditions, and may develop abrupt and uncomfortable conditions and suffer some manner of loss.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of uncertain and complicated conditions, with danger of loss through fraud, misrepresentation or trickery, unless they are unusually vigilant. Personal affiliations also need safe-guarding against loss and unwelcome and sudden changes.

A child born on this day may be inclined to resort to expediency rather than principle unless given strict training in veracity and probity.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WHEN DAD PLAYED CUPID

By EDWARD J. BREEN

THERE was nothing in the world that Jesu Aguirre loved better than himself, although he resisted in thinking that he loved Marie Portilla with all his heart and soul, and this fine morning as he entered her father's tannery office in Buenos Aires, he had decided that the time had arrived for making a formal request for her hand in marriage.

The great trouble with Jesu was that he reckoned without the girl—an enormous handicap when one considers that Marie had spent four of the recent years of her life in the companionship of girls of her own age in the United States of America. She had but recently come home from these school associations, and the wise Jesu decided that he would have no trouble sweeping her off her feet as long as he was armed with her father's consent.

The father absorbed some of the ideas the girl carried back with her and as a progressive business man was rather proud of the manner in which she determined things for herself, sorry as he had been all his life that this only child had not been a son. When the young friend and neighbor asked him in the formal Latin-American manner for his daughter's hand in marriage the first question that came to his mind and found immediate utterance was:

"What has Marie got to say about it?"

The youth, who had never traveled outside his native and well-loved Argentina, couldn't understand the question. The thought that came foremost in his mind was that the old man must be doddering because of his intense love for his only child—such a question didn't belong in his mind to a discussion of a marriage bargain. In fact it seemed to his very conventional and very practical mind that the girl shouldn't have anything to say about it. Wasn't he ready and willing to confer an honor upon her and upon her family?

"I came to you, senor, as the proper and honorable thing in the premises." This was the rejoinder of the young man. He had been following the precedent established many years before he came into being—the proper thing for a caballero to do when he wanted to take unto himself a wife.

But old Jose Portilla leaned back in his office chair and laughed right into the face of the ardent swain. He finally said:

"I'd suggest, my son, that you go and talk the matter over with her before you go any further, and if you want to succeed with her I want to warn you against telling her anything about your visit to me. She will make her own decision in this important matter and, as I love you, I wish you to approach the test without any handicap. Have you ever made love to her?"

This was entirely too much for the very proper young man who represented the heritage of respectability that came down through the generations of Aguirres ever since they landed from their native Spain, more than 200 years before. It was a monstrous thing to him to have the father of the girl that he loved and wanted to many speak to him in such a fashion. And when the old man laughed as he sent him on his way he felt that something was the matter with his mind—the heat and his growing age explained it.

As his horse entered the beautiful avenue that led to the hacienda of the girl of his seeking, Jesu couldn't frame the proper method of approaching his subject. It was silly to think that he, Jesu Aguirre, great son of a great line of caballeros who always did the right thing, should be compelled to plead to a woman to become his wife!

Wasn't it and shouldn't it be his place to make the decision?

The girl saw him approach and walked forward to meet him. She was glorious this particular morning, and as he looked at her he had to admit that her years among the gringos had worked wonderful improvement in her appearance. Yes! she seemed far more desirable this morning than she had ever seem to him. What grace! What charm! What poise!

Poise and grace were qualities that he wasn't accustomed to finding among the girls who remained at home. They were kept so secluded that they usually did not attain those qualities until after their marriage, if ever. Marie had everything he wanted, but still he didn't know how to approach his subject, even after he had alighted, and her warm, beautiful little hand was clasped in his.

"Such a time for Sir Bayard to come calling!" She bantered as she continued to cling to his hand in open friendliness. "Is there any little thing that a poor little girl can do for the great, big man?"

Words failed Jesu. Time and again he thought he had hit upon the right way, only to decide a minute later that his right way would be all wrong. She led him out of the glare of the sun and into the cool shelter of the patio, but he couldn't think of a way to open the subject. What must he do?

"Isn't everything beautiful this morning?" queried the girl as her wonderful eyes roamed over the broad expanse of acres that belonged to her father. "Every day since I have come home I am growing to love the place more and more. I am glad to be home, and soon I'm going to go to work, and relieve dad of some of his heavy responsibilities. You know he was always sorry he hadn't a son, but I'm going to show him what a girl can do."

Despite the coolness of the patio, the firmness and coolness of the speaker and the calm beauty of the many-colored tulips that made the place dazzle in the sunlight the young man grew warmer every second. Every additional word blasted his hopes. This idea of going to work! Marie in a tanyard! Ye gods!

But as every hope seemed to fade from him her allurement grew stronger and stronger. What a girl? What a woman? And then he began to think differently. And this is the way he began:

"Do you remember when we used to play we were married, and used to play keeping house sitting right here?"

She smiled her remembrance, and took his hand. That gave him the courage to keep on:

"Of course, you are only fooling when you talk about going to work?"

"Not at all!" was the incisive answer. "Loafing around, doing nothing may have been all right years ago, but we are now in another generation. I won't die of ennui if I can help it."

He leaned over to her, took her in his arms and told her in the best way he could that he wished her to keep house with him for life, that he had always loved her and that, as far as he was concerned she could work all she wanted to. All he wanted was her and her love. It was sweet music to her ears. This boy, she had always loved him until this morning he had seemed impossible to her ideas of things. As she kissed him a new life entered into her being. Since she had come home she had wanted this showdown above all other things. What had changed him?

"You know," she told him, "I'm glad to see I was mistaken in you. Wasn't it funny that I was expecting you to go ask my father, and do a lot of other old-fashioned things. And I find you are so modern?"

And it took her a long time to find out what her intended husband said as he kissed her again:

"God bless your father."

HORNSBY WINS BATTING CROWN

SQUAD SHOWS PEP

By

By Howard Harpster

All-America Quarterback of Carnegie Tech.

(Written Exclusively for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.)

PALO ALTO, Cal., Dec. 26.—The members of the all-East football team were not forgotten by Santa on this Christmas Day. Even though we are all many miles from our homes, old Santa visited us early in the morning and brought us all a dandy workout, which was held on the practice field of Stanford University.

Anyone watching the workout never could have guessed that the team had been through a hard two-hour scrimmage the day before, for there was a dash and a spirit in the session yesterday morning which must have been pleasing to the coaches.

Howard Harpster

In Monday's scrimmage there were many old stars in the opposing lineup. The more prominent ones were Adam Walsh and Boland of Notre Dame, and Walker and Ernie Nevers of Stanford.

For Christmas dinner the members of the squad were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Howell of this city. Santa visited us again in the Howell home after dinner, and gave us each a beautiful wrist watch with "East-West Game" engraved upon it. The watches were the gifts of the San Francisco Shriners.

SURPRISED AT RAIN

Monday the All-East squad was astonished to see it raining in California. We have been told by every native son whom we have met that California is the only place in the world free from bad weather conditions. We have had so much of the "good weather talk" thrust at us that I think it rather pleased the members of the squad to know that it rains even in Sunny California.

We must admit, however, that the weather we have experienced could not have been improved upon in any way.

Monday morning a blackboard drill was held in one of the class rooms in the Stanford gymnasium building. The plays were gone over in detail and the session proved very beneficial. At noon the Palo Alto Rotary Club entertained us at the Cardinal Hotel.

BEARS, TECH DRILL

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Christmas was just another training day for the Golden Bear of California and the Golden Tornado of Georgia, which teams will represent the West and East here New Year's Day in the Rose Tournament grid classic.

Coach Bill Alexander sent his Georgia Tech engineers through a set of posing exercises for the pleasure of cameramen Monday and yesterday locked the gates on Occidental College's gridiron and began real work.

The University of California team under the tutelage of Coach Clarence M. (Nibs) Price, planned to maintain its strenuous program of morning and afternoon practices behind the bolted gates of the tournament stadium.

When the players hung their football socks Christmas Eve on the mantels of Pasadena's two finest hostelries, their pleas to Santa Claus were more for a few touchdowns on January 1 than a request for striped neckties yesterday.

Georgia Tech's aggregation of pigskin jugglers unlimbered nicely after its cross-country jaunt, and was ready for the process of acclimation.

UZCUDUN BEATS RENAULT

CALI, Colombia, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Paulino Uzcudun, Basque heavyweight, won the decision over Jack Renault of Canada in a 10-round bout here yesterday afternoon before a crowd of 30,000. Paulino led virtually all the way and gave Renault a severe beating in several rounds. At his best, the Canadian was barely able to hold Paulino on even terms.

During the fifth and sixth rounds Renault made his strongest bid, making the Basque retreat with a furious attack in the fifth and drawing blood from his nose in the sixth with one powerful wallop while holding off Paulino's attack.

In the last four rounds, Paulino set the pace to win by a wide margin. He battered the Canadian all around the ring, landing almost at will with his right hand in the final frame. Renault devoted his efforts to a successful attempt to avoid a knockout. Worn down by Paulino's punishing body attacks during the early rounds, Renault seldom could land a telling blow toward the end.

Paulino weighed 200; Renault 195. Andy Neidereiter, who accompanied the fighters from New York, was referee.

Versatile Local Stars

MAURICE (SKI) LEBOSQUET, JR.

LeBosquet is the West Penn amateur golf champion and also stars at balk line and pocket billiards. Above he is seen making a masse shot. His favorite playing partner on the green table is Joe True, a fellow member of the Castle Shannon Golf Club.

GEORGE PITFIELD

Pitfield doubles in brass on the bowling alleys and billiard tables. He is one of the stars of the Service Department team, which is setting the pace in the Western Union Telegraph League.

IN LOCAL LEAGUE

Pitfield, who is 28, is making a bid for honors in the Pittsburgh Three-Cushion Billiard League, in which he finished fourth last season. He got off to a poor start in the present race, but is doing a comeback and now is within striking distance of second place. Above he is seen in action with the cue.

WEST PENN CHAMPION

LeBosquet on the links. He won the Western Pennsylvania amateur championship during the past season by defeating Jock Graham, 4 up, in 19 holes, in the final round at the Westmoreland Country Club. He won the second division championship in the same tournament in 1927. He is only 27 years old and came here from Chicago in 1926, after being graduated from the University of Illinois. He is a member of the Castle Shannon Golf Club, and won the club championship last year, but was out of town when the tournament was played this year and so could not defend the title. He was the medalist in the Cambridge Springs annual tournament this year and is rated one of the best golfers in this district.

LOST VALUE OF STOLEN BASE SHOWN.

EVERY TIME that Dick Bartell is mentioned as a possible future regular on the Pittsburgh baseball team, some one rises to offer the objection, "Dick is a great little hustler and fighter and a good-enough fielder, but he can't hit." All of which in view of some official figures that have just been made public, might lead one to ask what a ball player has got to do nowadays in order to be considered a hitter.

Dick Bartell

As a general rule, a man who can turn in an average of .300 is rated as belonging to the select batting set in the big show, and if you scan the official National League averages issued today you will discover that Bartell is credited with a mark of .3047, which, reduced to the three-figure system, means .305.

Quite a healthy average for any player, as hitters are generally gauged, even without considering Bartell's fielding ability, pep, gameness and other good qualities, so it would seem that those remarking that Dick can't hit are entirely out of order.

A TOTAL of 71 safeties, in 233 times at bat in 72 games, with 13 extra base knocks included, shows that Bartell averaged practically a blow to a game, and would appear to indicate that, for a player who "can't hit," Dick did pretty well in his first season as a big leaguer. And even at that, you won't realize how good he was until you look at the averages of some of the other men who played the same position and who are generally given a much higher rating.

Only one man at shortstop and but two at second base, the two places in which Bartell was used by Manager Bush during 1928, had better batting marks than Bartell. The lone shortstop to outhit him was Glenn Wright, with .310, and the only second sacker with higher averages were Rogers Hornsby, batting champion of the whole league, with .387, and Andy Reese, of the Giants, with .308. Frankie Frisch was four points below Bartell, Travis Jackson hit only .270, and Adams, Thompson, Critz, English, Maguire, Flowers, Cohen, Bancroft, Partridge, Ford, Maranville, Moore, Thevenow, Sand, and the rest of the shortstops and second sackers will also be found trailing the young Pirate. Where do they get that stuff, that he can't hit?

LLOYD WANER is another boy they said would not hit in his second season under the big top. Yet the averages show that he batted .335, or a fraction better than one hit in every three times at bat. He led the circuit in number of singles made. Besides he was third in the league in run-getting, being beaten out only by his brother Paul, and Jim Bottomley.

The Waner pair stood out more prominently than ever as one

Local Father, Son High in Tourney

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 26.—Tom Morrison and his son, R. G. Morrison, of Pittsburgh, tied for second low net in the seventh annual father and son tournament of the Pinehurst Country Club on the No. 2 links here Monday. The Morrisons scored 48-14-70.

Also high up in the scoring were H. C. and W. C. Fownes, Jr., who scored 83-11-72.

Donald and William Parson, of Youngstown, scored 88-12-76. J. B. Blackburn, Sr., and Jr., scored 121-18-103.

Gridders to Run Relay Race At Meet

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—A novel relay race will keep some speedy football players in training until February 11, when Manhattan College holds its annual indoor track meet. A race is planned for football players, who will use a football instead of the regulation relay baton. Entries will be limited to teams made of lettermen from college football teams.

The race will be run in shuttle fashion, four 100-yard laps across the Armory. At each end of the lanes, a 15-yard passing zone will be marked off and the runner must pass the ball to his successor in these zones.

BILLICK, FOE STEAL SHOW; REMATCHED

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

TWO hard-socking bantamweights, appearing in one of the six-round preliminary bouts, stole the show away from the main-bouters in the Christmas boxing matinee at Motor Square Garden yesterday afternoon to such an extent that as soon as they reached their dressing rooms they were rematched to appear in an eight-round repeat number as part of a double windup performance in the same ring New Year's afternoon.

The two crowd-pleasers were Dan Billick, of Duquesne, and dusky little Jackie Rodgers, of the North Side and Johnstown. Throughout their six rounds they figuratively stood the fans on their heads with their spectacular display of giving and taking. At the finish, the judges agreed in calling it a draw, to the evident satisfaction of the crowd, which applauded the verdict after an error by the announcer had awarded the go to Billick amid a chorus of mingled cheers and jeers. The mistake was due to a misunderstanding in reading the ballot slips. The referee, Eddie Kennedy, voted for Billick and the announcer figured this decision overruled the judges' finding of a draw. The rule of the State Athletic Commission is that the referee's decision does not count except in the event of the judges failing to reach an agreement. An agreement on a draw constitutes a decision.

Gold Mashie Event Originator Dies

NEWPORT, R. I., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—T. Sufferin Tailer, who died suddenly in Baltimore yesterday, was widely known as the originator of the Gold Mashie golf tournament, held annually on his private course here.

His course of nine holes is recognized as a model of its kind, each hole representing an effort to reproduce a difficult hole in another course.

He is survived by his widow, the former Harriette S. Brown, of Baltimore; a daughter, who was married in July to Walter Gurnee Dyer, of New York, and two sons, T. Suffern Tailer and Lorilla Suffern Tailer.

WEISSMULLER TO TURN PRO JANUARY 3

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Johnny Weismuller, one of the greatest swimmers of all time and holder of most of the world's record for free style performances will turn professional after January 3, the Illinois Athletic Club, whose colors the aquatic star wears, announced last night.

Weissmuller will compete as an amateur for the last time in the twenty-second annual Cook county interscholastic swimming championships at the I. A. C. pool here on that date, the club announcement said.

Weissmuller's abdication of the throne he holds, undisputed, in international swimming ranks, was made known in a letter to W. G. Uffendell, chairman of the club's athletic committee.

The swimmer gave no indication of his plans for the future in the letter, but friends said he expected to go into theatrical work with a swim act that would necessitate forfeiture of his amateur status.

BUC STARS FINISH HIGH

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

ROGERS HORNSBY dethroned Paul Waner as as batting king of the National League during this year's campaign, according to the official figures published today.

The Pirate star, who won first honors in 1927, was neck-and-neck with the hard-hitting Texan as they went down the home stretch. Paul slumped in the important period, while the Rajah set a fast clip, he finishing with a mark of .387 as against .370 for the little southpaw slugger.

Brother Paul and Rogers were almost tied when the Buccos landed in Boston on their last Eastern trip. In the series that followed Paul experienced a severe slump as his rival was riding high, wide and handsome in the face of the Pittsburgh pitchers.

SEVENTH TIME

Hornsby thus gained the batting leadership of the league for the seventh time. He acquired unusual distinction in winning the throne six times in a row, beginning with 1920.

The Rajah, however, is still one year behind Honus Wagner in the matter of batting championship. The famed Flying Dutchman copped the laurel eight times as a member of the Pirates. One might say with unlimited confidence that Wagner and Hornsby are a pretty fair pair of righthand hitters.

Three Pirate stars were high among the leaders in batting. Sharing honors with P. Waner were Capt. Pie Traynor and Lloyd Waner. The Bucco captain was sixth among the regulars of the

Cuyler May Lead Cub Lineup In Spring

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—The batting order already has begun to bother Joe McCarthy, boss of the Chicago Cubs, with the opening of baseball's spring training months away.

With an array of heavy hitters such as Hornsby, Cuyler, Stephenson and Wilson, as the nucleus for a score-producing combination, McCarthy is faced with the problem of finding an athlete having the qualifications of a second-place hitter.

This spot in the lineup demands a player who can hit fairly well, who can run, bunt, and look 'em over. Cuyler has all these requisites, save the ability to bunt.

English, last season's leadoff man, apparently comes closer to the requirements than anybody else, so in the absence of strength from an unexpected source, it is probable Cuyler will top the batting list next spring with English, Hornsby, Wilson and Stephenson following in the order named.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(INS.)—Ace Hudkins plans to wind up training today for his 10-round bout with Rene De Vos, Belgian middleweight, at Madison Square Garden Friday night. The Wildcat has been training almost daily since December 10, the date for which the scrap originally was scheduled.

NATIONAL TUBERS TRIP ROVERS IN UPSET

By TOM BIRKS.

PLAYING typical cup tie soccer, the McKeesport National Tube eleven rather upset the dope Christmas Day by defeating the Pittsburgh Rovers, 3 goals to 2, at the Pitt Stadium. It qualified for the final round of the West Penn Senior Cup, meeting the winner of the Heidelberg-Dunlevy game, to be staged at the Stadium, New Years Day.

The game was nothing to rave over, although the result did upset the dope. The critics did not give the Tubers even a slight chance to cop. The Rovers were overwhelming favorites. But if the Rovers ever put up a more miserable game, the writer does not know of it. National Tube deservedly took home the victory, because it opened up and introduced a new center forward to Pittsburgh fans in Hennigan. It was this Irishman who put a crimp in the Rovers' chances; he proved a thorn in the side of their defense throughout.

DOPE UPSET

Never in local soccer history has a game's outlook changed so quickly as it did in the home of the Pitt Panther. After steadily attacking for no good reason at all the Rovers allowed National Tube to start swinging the ball all over the lot. Before half time, National Tube had netted it three times without a retaliation from the Rovers. The three goals were indirectly due to Hennigan's good work.

Clark and Dunlap were the only Rovers' players to live up to their reputations. Hennigan was the spark plug of the winning club. Strang is a good back, and Palmer got in some nice centers. The lineup:

National Tube—3.		Pgh. Rovers—2.
Miclosky	G	Marshall
Hennigan	R R	Hewitt
Strange	R H	Zapano
Smith	C H	Beckow
Kirk	C H	Gilford
Williamson	L H	Clark
Davis	O R	White
Mosby	I R	Moran
Monahan	I	Muir
Murphy	I L	Dunlap
Finan	O L	Bradshaw

Goal scores: White, Dunlap, Mrcliosky, Murphy. Substitutes: Scott for Smith, Hennigan for Monahan. Scots at half time—1-0, National Tube. Time of halves—45 minutes. Referee—Peckovich.

SOUTH HILLS VICTOR

South Hills High School captured its semi-final round contest for the Cameron Scholastic Cup yesterday when it defeated Langley High School, 2 to 1. The lineup:

South Hills—2.		Langley—1.
Agostino	G	Viscovich
Porter	R B	Miller
Jones	L B	Detwiler
Miller	R H	Graber
Lee	C H	Ward
Fitzgerald	L H	Muscovich
Perry	O R	Kolb
Perry	I R	Douglas
Currie	C	Bersnik
Gaston	I L	Turner
Rigg	O L	Gesenecki

Score at half time, 1-0, Langley. Final score—2-1, South Hills. Referee—W. Kerr. Linesmen—T. Crabbe and J. Smith. Time of halves—30 minutes. Goals scored by—South Hills, Currie. Star players—Currie, Porter, Lee, Rigg, Detwiler, Ward, Gesenicki.

GOLDENSON FIVE, RELIANCE MEET TONIGHT

By JULIUS LEVIN.

THE Goldensons, of the South Side, making a strong comeback after getting off to a poor start in the Allegheny County League, will attempt to strengthen their position tonight when they invade the One Hundred and Seventy-sixth Field Artillery Armory to meet Charley Price's Reliance passers in the only league game carded.

This game is the first scheduled in the third week of the County League and inasmuch as both teams have enjoyed a long rest the players should be in fine fettle. While the Goldensons have been showing improved form of late they are not taking tonight's game lightly and will be ready to flash their best form against Reliance.

Reliance has not been going any too well in the league to date, but the downtown floor machine is composed of veteran stars who are liable to break loose in a scoring frenzy at any time. Al Speer will referee tonight's game.

Two attractive games are carded tonight in the Pittsburgh & Ohio Valley League, Greenfield traveling to Brereton avenue to meet Immaculate Heart, while McKeesport Alumni is the guest of the Morrys at Knights of Columbus Hall in Braddock.

The Greenfield Club, of McKees Rocks will not be able to use Hamilton School for its home game this week and as a result its contest with the Jeannette Felders, carded for tomorrow, has been postponed until Thursday, January 24.

Two new players have been added to the roster of the Red McMahans, of the South Side, who have won six straight and 10 out of their last 11 games. The latest additions are James Deery and Bill Lengwin, both rangy centers. Lengwin made a big reputation while a member of the crack South High School team and he should prove a valuable asset to the Market House favorites.

Friday night the McMahans will attempt to score their seventh straight victory when they meet the Happy McVeys of the Junior League in a preliminary to the Duquesne Light battle at the South Side Market House. Saturday the Lucky Club of Ingram will be met on the latter's floor.

OSCAR GARDNER, GREAT FIGHTER, SUCCUMBS

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Oscar Gardner, known 30 years ago as "The Omaha Kid" when he was a contender for the bantamweight and featherweight championships, died yesterday after a lingering illness. He participated in 547 ring battles.

His widow and two children reside in Portland, Ore.

WORKED IN MONESSEN

Oscar Gardner, who died yesterday in Minneapolis, worked for many years as a special policeman in a steel plant at Monessen. He fought several times in the Pittsburgh district or vicinity during his long, active career. His first bout near here took place January 23, 1899, when he battled to a 10-round draw with Tommy Hogan. Again, on July 2, 1900, Gardner appeared in a 20-round fight with Jack McClelland, of this city, that bout also winding up in a draw.

He was credited with a knockout over McClelland at Wheeling on June 30, 1898. It was in Wheeling that Oscar and his brother, Eddie, also a fighter, made their home.

Many old-timers in the Pittsburgh district believe that there are few first-class bantams, featherweights, possibly even lightweights, of the present generation who could come up to the prowess of Gardner at his best. They hold him very high in their esteem.

COLD weather has greatly added to the sales of the Lone Star Gas Corporation during the past few months. The results of extending lines and opening service to new communities are also beginning to show in the total demand. The prediction that 1928 earnings will be far greater than those of 1927 is now assured of fulfillment.

Last year Lone Star Gas reported net profit of $3,829,961 which was equivalent to $3.48 a share on the capital stock. The company supplies natural gas to Dallas, Fort Worth and 152 other cities and towns in Texas and to several points in Oklahoma.

THE program for the extension of long-distance transmission lines has been practically completed, but a steady increase in the number of customers is expected to continue for a long time.

About three years are required to secure a fully developed load in a community in which gas service has just been started. This indicates that Lone Star can expect its business to grow rapidly for several years without making any large capital expenditures for new transmission lines.

PLATE GLASS makers are looking hopefully toward Washington for some action on their petition for a higher tariff. The findings of the Tariff Commission have been before the president for several months. Should favorable action be taken, an opportunity would be given to plate glass producers to show a profit.

FOR the past year the volume of plate glass sales has been large, but earnings have been small or altogether absent. November production of polished plate glass was 10,978,166 square feet, this was 472,200 square feet more than in October and 2,405,422 more than in November, 1927. December production probably will be less than November's high rate of output as a result of the reduction in automobile output.

DOMESTIC competition between plate glass makers promises to be even more severe in the future. The Libby-Owens Sheet Glass Company is planning to spend $4,000,000 to double the capacity of the Toledo factory.

The General Motors Corporation will be able to supply a large share of its own requirements when the Ottawa (Ill.) plant of its subsidiary, the National Plate Glass Company, is completed. This will be able to make 24,000,000 square feet of glass a year in sizes suitable for fabrication into shatter-proof glass.

OTHER additions to capacity are being made by producers such as the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company and the Edward Ford Plate Glass Company.

The American Window Glass Company is entering the plate glass field and more operators of sheet glass plants may install equipment for grinding and polishing their output in plate glass.

FURTHER expansion in the operation of chain stores has been predicted by the founder of one of the most unusual chains in existence. Robert T. Neely, president of Nedick's Inc, the street corner dispenser of orange juice in New York and seven other cities, says that within the next few years all important lines of merchandising will be organized into chain store systems and it will become increasingly difficult for the small merchant to compete.

THE Nedick stores probably achieve the ideal in chain operations. On an inventory never exceeding $50,000 a total business of $3,500,000 a year is done. The juice of 25,000,000 squeezed oranges is sold to 20,000,000 people. Specialization also reaches its summit since only a few lines in addition to the orange drink are carried.

Besides having a unique business, Mr. Neely, himself, is remarkable, as chain store operators go. He did not start as a poor boy peddling oranges on the sidewalk. He started life with a good income although less than $25,000 was invested in the business which is now Nedick's Inc.

Are Wholesale Dismissals of Old Workers Justice?

By B. C. FORBES

A VERY able business man recently was elected president of a large corporation. Almost immediately stories became current of wholesale dismissals.

Not only were changes made among high-ups almost as rapidly as New York's police commissioner, Grover Whalen, has been making them; but statements flew thick and fast concerning the tremendous number of ordinary employes being laid off. And it was added that the older workers, especially the oldest workers, were faring worst of all.

When a new man or a new manager takes hold of a large enterprise, what is the right attitude for him to take toward the working force?

I WAS able to catch this new president only for a moment and this was as far as our conversation went:

"I have been getting lots of complaints about the ruthless way you are knocking heads off," I told him.

"It is the worst over-manned company I have known in my life—worse than anything I would have believed. I found it over-manned from top to bottom," he declared.

"I am not worrying about those at the top, because they probably are in a position to take care of themselves," I replied. "But how about the poor devils at the bottom, especially the older men who will stand mighty little chance of getting other jobs?"

"We supply a public necessity, something the public have to buy from us," he explained. "I feel that the public are entitled to be supplied at the lowest possible cost. I have already reduced the prices and I feel sure that I will be able to effect so many more economies that prices can be reduced still more."

"But how about the old fellows? I am told you don't pension them.

At that moment he was pulled away and all he had time to say was:

"I would like to talk over the whole situation with you very shortly."

I AM looking forward to the promised talk because, frankly, I cannot quite understand, without fuller explanation, why this executive, whom I have always regarded as of the highest type, can justify throwing on the streets scores if not hundreds of old employes without making the slightest provision for their blue future—provided, that is, the stories circulated are correct.

Take this particular corporation. It is true that the public have to use its product. Admittedly, therefore, it is extremely important that the cost to the public should be reduced to the utmost practicable limits consistent with the decent treatment of those working to produce it and of the stockholders.

But this enterprise has been very successful and its stockholders have been receiving at least an average return on their money.

TO WHOM does an employer, or chief executive, owe his first duty?

Is it to the public?

Is it to his stockholders?

Is it to his workers?

IN THE old days such a question would have been foolish because it was then the rule to put stockholders' interests first and to give little thought either to the public or to employes.

But has not American civilization, have not American ideals, have not the most enlightened American employers advanced to the stage where they feel that their first responsibility is to their own work-folks?

Does not American public opinion now favor the concern that so treats its workers that they shall become not only loyal to their organization, but become loyal American citizens?

Does not American public opinion condemn any employer who manufactures malcontents, Socialists, Soviets?

Is it your opinion that the American people, as a whole, want any business enterprise to cut its prices to a point where it cannot make decent provision for its own workers?

STOCKS RENEW UPWARD TREND

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—The upward movement of stock prices was resumed at the opening of today's market. Initial gains at a point or so were recorded by American Telephone, Greene Cananea Copper, Missouri Pacific, General Electric and Nash Motors.

Some irregularity developed before the end of the first hour but the main price tendency continued upward. Trading was relatively light in volume, indicating an absense of any widespread public participation. Pools, apparently unconcerned over the prospect of a "money squeeze" this week, continued to bid for a wide assortment of specialties in which favorable dividend or merger developments are believed to be pending.

Early advances of a point or two were recorded by such widely diversified issues as Dupont, Electric Auto Lite, Wright Aeronautical, United States Steel, Detroit Edison, Chrysler Motors, Montgomery Ward, Reynolds Tobacco B and Atlantic Coast Line.

Radio quickly fell back 2 points on a renewal of selling pressure. American Steel Foundries, Beech-nut packing and Kennecott Copper yielded a point or so.

Foreign exchanges opened steady with sterling cables unchanged at $4.85 17-32.

Burroughs Adding Machine was the individual feature in the morning trading, soaring 15 points to a new high record at 233. There was the usual pre-automobile show demonstration in the motor shares. Chrysler moving up more than 2 points and Hudson, Packard, Pierce Arrow and several others advancing a point or more. Wright Aeronautical and General Railway Signal each climbed more than 4 points, and Radio converted its early loss of 2 points into a gain of 2 points. Sears, Roebuck fell nearly 4 points before midday. Call money renewed at 5 per cent.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—The raw sugar market was unchanged early today with no sales reported. Cubas for prompt shipment were available at 3.96 duty paid, while store sugar could probably be obtained at 1-32c below this, but there was no interest displayed on the part of refiners. The raw sugar futures market opened one point higher to one point lower with near months relatively steady on covering and trade buying prompted by the issuance of the January notices. Later deliveries were easier under liquidation and commission house selling. Volume of business was light. A good part of the early trading was in the form of exchanges from the near to the more distant positions. The London market was closed. The refined market was steady and unchanged at 5.25 for fine granulated with trading light.

of the National League's leading features. With Paul leading the loop in run-getting, with 142, not to mention two-base hits, and Lloyd ranking third with 121, the two scored a total of 263 runs, or more than one-third as many as the entire Boston, Philadelphia or Brooklyn club. Babe Ruth, with 163, was the only player in the majors to score more runs than Paul, and Ruth and Lou Gehrig, or Ruth and Earl Combs were the only two players on one club to register more tallies than Paul and Lloyd.

Paul Waner

EVIDENCE that a powerful attack will not win a pennant unless there is the right kind of pitching to back it up is produced again by the Pittsburgh's club record. The Pirates, with an average of .309, were the only club in either big league to hit .300 as a club; they had 10 .300 individual hitters, more than any other team in either loop, the combined total of the two circuits being 97; they scored more runs than any other club except the Yankees, and they made more hits and more triples than any other club in either loop. Yet they finished only fourth.

THE averages also show how the stolen base has lost its value since the advent of the lively ball. The Yankees stole fewer sacks than any other club in either league, yet they again won the American League pennant and the world championship. The White Sox led both loops with 139 steals, but finished only fifth in their league.

Detroit and Washington, second and third in steals in the two leagues ranked only sixth and fourth in the American League pennant standing. Chicago and Cincinnati tied for the National League stealing leadership with 83, but Chicago finished only third and Cincinnati fifth in the flag table.

PITTSBURGH'S new hockey center, Frank Frederickson, is the only Icelander in the National League. He is a descendant of one of the Icelandic families that settled in the western part of Canada. Frederickson, who is 33 years old, makes his home in Winnipeg. He was captain of the Winnipeg Falcons, all Icelanders, who won the Allan cup in 1920 and the Olympic title in Antwerp that year. He turned professional after joining the Victoria club.

Johnny Layton

Frederickson was in the Royal Air Force during the World War and had an exciting experience on a torpedoed troop ship in the Mediterranean. He is a player of great endurance, having played 50 of the 60 minutes in a league game. With Victoria, he once made a record of 54 goals and assists in 24 games.

THE scheduled Pittsburgh visit of Joseph Concannon, nationally known pocket billiard expert, in connection with the assumption of control of pocket billiard competiton here by the National Billiard Association, recalls to Martin J. Welk, the former local cue star, a championship contest between Concannon and Johnny Layton, then the pocket game titleholder, that is considered by many one of the greatest games in the annals of the sport. It was a dozen years ago. Layton was defending his newly-won pocket billiard crown in a 450-point match with Concannon. It was bitterly fought in every frame. Finally with 15 balls on the table, 14 of them racked on the spot and one loose, Concannon missed a long shot for the loose one that would have given him 450 balls, the match and the title. The pack of 14 on the spot remained intact. Layton needed 13 balls. The one loose ball rolled into position from which John had a perfect break shot. He pocketed it and broke the bunch, but when the cue ball stopped it lay between two other balls in such a manner that it was impossible to shoot with even the remotest chance to score.

LAYTON almost imperceptibly touched the cue ball with the tip of his cue, a deliberate scratch, leaving the layout the same. Concannon did likewise. Layton deliberately scratched again; so did Concannon. Layton then was faced with a stiff problem. If he scratched again, according to the rules, he would have to deduct 15 from his string; if he shot he must leave an opening for Concannon, who, as a result of scratching twice, needed three, which he could score easily, with the balls scattered as they were. The title hung in the balance. Layton arched his well-known gymnastic eye brows; the spectators sat on the edges of their chairs; the crucial moment had arrived. Layton deliberately scratched again.

The referee took 15 from his string and Layton needed 30 balls to his opponent's three. But it was Concannon's shot, with the whole 15 balls racked on the spot, truly a "tough spot" for Joe. Concannon, too, could have scratched for the third time, but he essayed to take a chance. Carefully though he shot, he left an opening and Layton scored, scattering the balls over the table, finally running 30 and out, victor after one of the most ingenious and daring stunts ever performed on a billiard table.

THE directors of the Brooklyn baseball club, after refusing since the close of the 1928 season to get together, finally held a meeting and tried to beat Dazzy Vance to it and save $4,000 by voting to give him a salary increase of $1,000 for 1929. Vance drew $20,000 last season and has been reported as threatening to demand $25,000 for next year.

No action was taken on the claim of Jess Petty, new Pirate pitcher, who claims that the Dodger management promised to return to him $1,153.34, deducted from his pay last season when he was fined and suspended. "The Petty matter is one for the manager of the club to settle," said Vice President Steve McKeever. If he wanted the money refunded he should have recommended such action to the directors."

Roy Worters

ROY WORTERS, former goal keeper of the Pittsburgh hockey team, is picked as the net guardian on an all-time team selected by Tommy Gorman, manager of the New York Americans. The only other player active in recent years who is chosen on the mythical sextet is Sprague Cleghorn, brother of the Pirate manager, and now pilot of the Newark Bulldogs. The team selected by Gorman follows: Worters, goal; Hod Stuart and Sprague Cleghorn, defense; Frank McGee, center; Tom Phillips and Scotty Davidson, wings; Cyclone Fred Taylor, utility, pronounced by Gorman the "greatest player ever."

GORMAN appends a short list of "honorable mentions," as follows: Newsy Lalonde, Lionel Conacher, Billy Burch and Les Patrick. Some other great players are named, including Percy Lesueuer, a former goalie, now manager of the Buffalo club, and Frank (King) Clancy, of Ottawa. Clancy has played every position in hockey.

Four of the six players picked by Gorman as the best of all time are dead—Stuart, McGee, Phillips and Davidson. Two of these, McGee and Davidson, were killed in action overseas while serving with Canadian forces in the World War. Stuart, in particular, is well remembered by Pittsburgh fans for the many brilliant exhibitions he gave here a quarter of a century ago. He was so clearly in a class of his own that he was called the "Honus Wagner of hockey."

BILLICK

knockout in the first round, during which he twice went reeling to the floor under the impact of Rodgers' sweeping rights to the jaw and spurned taking a count, he came back to carry the next four rounds and lose the last by a shade when Rodgers again proved dangerous with some vicious slugging. Both were exhausted at the final bell, but it should have been evident that Billick's superior boxing and his fighting rally and driving tactics throughout had earned him an edge. Even in that first round he was cutting his left hand into Rodgers' face and paving the way for his comeback later.

Jackie put everything he had into that opening assault and was as tired at the bell as Billick, although he had not suffered the same heavy punishment. That Billick left kept working overtime thereafter, and, coupled with a good right that jolted Rodgers when it landed, it slowed down the latter considerably and kept Billick in the lead even in the face of Jackie's hard closing rally.

It was one of the greatest battles ever fought in the Garden.

Rodgers weighed 117 pounds and Billick 121.

DeMARCO BEATS CEDER

The 10-round windup saw Cuddy DeMarco outsmart Rudy Ceder to turn back the challenge of another rival for local supremacy in his class. As figured in advance, Ceder's only chance lay in scoring a knockout, and, after threatening to do so in the fourth and fifth rounds, he subsided and lumbered awkwardly through the remainder of the bout, an easy victim of DeMarco's boxing prowess. He dropped Cuddy for no count twice in the fifth round, giving the crowd a thrill, but that was the limit of his bid for victory.

Ceder required three rounds in which to warm up to the job in hand and during that time he appeared a setup for the wily DeMarco, who boxed coolly, evading Rudy's wild swings and stabbing and cutting in sharp blows from outside and then tying him up and jolting him about at close quarters.

Early in the fourth round, Ceder landed on the belt line and was warned to be more careful with his blows. Shortly afterward, he clipped Cuddy on the chin with a hard right and the latter rushed in close. As they were breaking out of a clinch, Rudy nailed Cuddy again with the same dangerous right and DeMarco grabbed and held on tight, the referee having to pry him loose. Ceder rushed after DeMarco to follow up his advantage, but fell down as he missed a swing. He beat a tattoo on DeMarco's body with both fists until the bell and had the crowd in frenzy of excitement.

The fifth round was under way only a short time before Ceder sent over another right to the chin that dazed his opponent, who performed a "hesitation" fall. He tottered uncertainly, and, as Ceder drew back, dropped along the ropes. He got up without a count and tried to mix but again the right landed and Cuddy hit the canvas more suddenly than the first time, but jumped up with more agility before a count could be started. He fought back wildly and they wound up battering each other to the body. It was a big round for Ceder.

Ceder had shot his all in those fourth and fifth rounds and was tired as he came up for the sixth. DeMarco went to work on him as in the first three rounds, easily outboxing him and outfighting him in close. Rudy tried one big looping right, almost from the floor, but missed and fell down from the force of the swing.

From this point on to the finish, it was a rough mauling bee, with DeMarco always in command of the situation. It did not compare with the Billick-Rodgers bout from the standpoint of proving interesting.

DeMarco weighed 115½ pounds and Ceder 119½. In addition to losing the decision, Ceder dropped a $50 weight forfeit for being three-quarters of a pound over the notch stipulated in his contract.

CAREY DISAPPOINTS AGAIN

Tug Phillips, of Fayette City, 142½ pounds, and Johnny Carey, of Erie, 146, labored through eight listless rounds in the semi-final, with Phillips getting the decision. It was Carey's second bad fight in as many starts in the local ring and the fans, judging from their mutterings of disapproval, won't be sore if they never see him in action again. He is tall and rangy and a fair boxer and good hitter, but spends most of his time getting ready to do something and then doesn't put the plan into execution. Phillips wasn't much better, but at least did a little bit of forcing.

Tiger Joe Randall, Negro, of Elizabeth, lost three rounds and held his own in two more in his six-round bout with Joe Colombo, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and then scored a knockdown for a count of eight with a right to the jaw in the last round and was awarded the decision. Colombo, who got up fresh from the knockdown and finished fighting well, showed to good advantage throughout and deserved the verdict with something to spare, but Randall evidently had to have his little Christmas present. Both weighed 145 pounds.

Tom Harris, of Lawrenceville, 142 pounds, defeated Jack McCarthy, of the South Side, 146, in the four-round opener.

Joe Reilly, Eddie Kennedy, Red Robinson and Jack Henderson acted as referees. The judges were Frank Brown and Jim McLaughlin. A. C. Couch was the timekeeper. The crowd was the largest of the season thus far at the Garden.

O'MALLEY BEATS RUDY

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 26.—Steve O'Malley, of Bellaire, O., in the main go of a five-bout show at the Gardens A. C., here yesterday afternoon, won a slashing fight from Young Rudy, of Charleroi, substituting for Dominick Proffo, of Cecil. O'Malley fought one of the best fights of his career and won by a rather wide margin from the rugged Magic City battler.

Giving Rudy a boxing lesson from the start, O'Malley in the last two rounds switched suddenly to an aggressive campaign and outpunched his rival. The Bellaire lad has been seen in a Washington ring on numerous occasions but never did he show to better advantage than before the big holiday crowd that witnessed one of the finest shows ever staged in this district.

Two knockouts featured the matinee. Harry Spencer, rugged Washington 140-pounder, in the third preliminary, put Ray Kerr, of Pittsburgh, away with a series of punches to the jaw with the first round not more than two minutes old.

Rey Ryan, also of Washington, in the semi-final, stowed away Tommy Joyce, of Detroit, in the second round. Joyce substituted for Leo Kybwrski, of Swissvale, who has influenza.

Harold Heilman, of Donora, won from Young Gunboat Smith, of Clarksburg, W. Va., in the first preliminary, while Johnny Smackey, of Canonsburg, got the decision over Tommy Heilman, of Donora, in the second bout.

Firpo Is Beaten
By Jack Dillon

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Dec. 26.—Young Jack Dillon, of Nashville, Tenn., won the decision over Henry Firpo, of Louisville, Ky., at Jolly Bowl here yesterday afternoon in a slashing 10-round go. The men stood toe to toe a great part of the time and exchanged blows. Firpo put up a fine battle, but Dillon had the edge in the eyes of the judges.

Joey Goodman, of Norfolk, Va., was awarded the decision over U. S. Carpentier, of New Kensington, in the six-round semi-final. Joe Dinger, of New Castle, knocked out Bill Beatty, of Nashville, Tenn., in the first round. Elino Clark and Tom Farrow, both of New Castle, fought a four-round draw, and Nick Polis, of Aliquippa, won the decision from Charley Sabol, of Pittsburgh, in the four-round opener. George Chip was the referee.

hits with 42, and Hazen Cuyler led the base-stealers with 37 thefts.

PAUL LEADS IN RUNS

Brother Paul had the distinction of scoring the most runs, he crossing the plate 142 times.

Bottomley had the biggest total of bases out of his season's hits, his card showing 362. Freddie Lindstrom, who finished third in batting with a mark of .358, was ahead of all competitors in the matter of hits with 231.

Seven players took part in all their club's games, as follows: Bissonette, Brooklyn; Douthit, St. Louis; Critz, Cincinnati; Bell, Boston; Thompson, Philadelphia, and Paul and Lloyd Waner, Pittsburgh.

Eddie Brown, Braves' outfielder, took part in 618 consecutive games before he was benched on June 8. This feat set a new record in the league, the previous record being held by Fred Luderus, former Philly firstbaseman, who played in 533 games. Brown recently was sold to Toledo by the Braves.

The Pirates made a runaway race of club hitting with a mark of .309. No other major-league team was able to bat as high as .300 for the season. The Giants were second in the Heydler circuit with .293.

BRAVES' BOSS RAPS COUNCIL

BOSTON, Dec. 26.—(INS.)—Prompt action by the city council tomorrow in accepting the law legalizing professional baseball on Sunday was demanded today by Charles F. Adams, vice president of the Braves, in behalf of thousands who voted for the bill.

In a statement made public Adams reiterated the charge of an attempted bribery by a city councilman, but declared that the real issue—acceptance of the law—had been beclouded.

Adams said he was ready to appear before the council tomorrow, adding that he did not think it would be necessary as all indications pointed to a favorable vote and dropping of the controversy. Some councilmen, however, were reported as determined to have the bribery charge aired.

BUGS BAER Says

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

MONDAY night the boys dashed into the beauty parlors and come out with whiskers tangled in good cheer and happiness.

Every old man played Santa even if their faces were not the type.

In the last two attempts to look like Kris Kringle we have merely succeeded in looking like a lean and eager wolf.

We have never yet made the grade. There should be a collegiate course of instruction enabling young papas to learn how to paste on eyebrows and whiskers on the night before Christmas.

By the time we had glued on the mustache, the chinstraps and the dewlaps, we resembled the ignoble and blasted tyrant Bel-Gumbo squinting through the hanging gardens of Babylonia.

It's all a flop. In spite of the fact that the nose is perfect. It is red and bulbous. In fact it is an eighteenth century beezer on a law-abiding face.

We have tried all kinds of whiskers. The full balloon type with 36 pounds of pressure all around. But they flatten out coming down the chimmey.

The Santa Clause herbage clipped on the last style of the boyish bob is not quite the thing.

The youngsters demand plenty of Alfalfa with their Kris Kringles.

This is not very good. You ain't Santa. You ain't Mutt, and you ain't Jeff.

We shold advise careful selection in the paste used to vulcanize the whiskers to your epidermis.

Last year we used cement with a little macadamized filling. When you try to pull them off again you discover the fixtures go along with the goodwill. Save the surface and you save all.

We have learned not to use adhesive tape or tar paper. Remember that he who is king for a day is liable to be a bum for the next couple of weeks.

BARNEY GOOGLE AND SPARK PLUG — The Professor Has a Plan

SLEEPING SICKNESS
WHICH BAFFLES EVERYBODY, EVEN THE GREAT ZANANI, WHO HAS TRIED EVERY MEANS WITHIN HIS POWER AND STILL HAS FAILED TO AWAKEN HIM

I MUST ADMIT, MR. GOOGLE, THAT I AM COMPLETELY AT A LOSS WHAT TO DO — SPARK PLUG SEEMS TO BE ALL RIGHT, BUT NOTHING I CAN DO SEEMS TO MAKE ANY IMPRESSION ON HIM
BUT PROFESSOR, WE'VE GOTTA DO SUMPAI — I CAN'T LET THAT HORSEFACE KLOTZ MAKE A LAUGHING STOCK OUT OF ME IN FRONT OF ALL MY PALS — THINK, PROFESSOR, THINK SPARKY, WHY DON'T YOU OPEN YOUR BIG BROWN EYES FOR PAPA? DON'T YOU KNOW THAT EVERYTHING DEPENDS ON YOU WINNING THE RACE FROM THAT SKINNY PINKY WINKY BABY? OH BAW — THIS IS AWFUL!
ZZZ ZZZ
MR. GOOGLE — I HAVE A THOUGHT — IF SPARK PLUG WON'T WAKE UP WE HAVE TO LET HIM SLEEP, BUT I CAN ALWAYS HYPNOTIZE THE OTHER HORSE

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Nevermore—Until Next Christmas

I WISH I KNEW WHICH ONE OF THAT MOB IT WAS WHO STUFFED THEMSELVES FULL OF OUR TURKEY YESTERDAY AND THEN TOOK A BIG BLACK PENCIL AND SCRIBBLED ALL OVER THE BATHROOM. BUNGLE IS A BUM?
AND I WISH I KNEW WHICH ONE OF THEM BURNED A BIG HOLE IN MY BEST RUG WITH A CIGARETTE. SUCH PEOPLE!
© Wright Syndicate, Inc. N.Y.
THE ONLY TIME THOSE PEOPLE INVITE ME ANYWHERE IS WHEN THEY TELL ME WHERE TO GO FOR ASKING THEM NOT TO BUST UP FURNITURE, AND STUFF LIKE THAT.
EVERY YEAR WE HAVE THIS HOUSE FULL OF HUNGRY RELATIVES WHO, AFTER STUFFING UNTIL THEY CAN'T MOVE, TALK AS IF THIS WAS A RESTAURANT WHERE THEY GOT POOR SERVICE AND WERE OVERCHARGED.
ALL THEY GAVE ME YESTERDAY WAS A COUPLE OF TRICK CIGARS THAT ACTED LIKE THE FINISH OF A 4TH OF JULY CELEBRATION WHEN I LIGHTED 'EM. FINE STUFF!
THE WOMEN DON'T FORGET TO MARK THEIR INITIALS ON PLACES WHERE THEY HAPPEN TO FIND A LITTLE DUST, TOO. THAT'S SUPPOSED TO BE THE HIGHEST TYPE OF HUMOR.
WELL MY MIND IS MADE UP. THEY'LL NEVER GET ANOTHER CHANCE TO TELL ME, AFTER I STAND OVER A HOT STOVE FOR DAYS, THAT MY TURKEY REMINDS THEM OF SOUP MEAT, AND TO REMIND ME AT LEAST FIFTY TIMES THAT I DIDN'T PUT ENOUGH SAGE IN THE DRESSING. HA!
ABSOLUTELY! I'M TIRED OF PEOPLE WHO EAT THEMSELVES INTO A SIEGE OF DYSPEPSIA AND THEN SEND US THEIR DOCTOR BILLS AS A CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

MYSTERY STORY

Interesting poison test used by Scotland Yard experts. Detective, dressed like a horse, samples poison. Note the effect.

When Scotland Yard Operative 336, Mr. Ogle, hurriedly grabbd the candy off the Christmas tree he thought he was alone.

The family, awakened by the crunching (it was hard candy) hurried downstairs. They found their husband and father wearing a pained expression on his face.

But it wass not as bad as one might surmise.

In fact, he had stuffed his mouth so hurriedly that the very first piece stuck in his throat, and the rest of the candy was therefore delayed in transit. Fortunately, he was seized by an impulse to sneeze, which he did, scattering candy hither and thither. All would have been well had not—

Half Million Fine Gift For Research at Pitt

Through a gift of $500,000 by Dr. and Mrs. Ogden M. Edwards, Jr., research work in bacteriology, chemistry, physiology, etc., also in diagnosis of disease is to be the purpose of the Laboratories of Applied Science, which is to be part of the medical center of the University of Pittsburgh, in accordance with the intentions of the donors of this wonderful benefaction.

Gifts of this nature are gifts to humanity. Through it medical students in Pitt will become better fitted to relieve the ailing and the suffering as the univesity becomes better equipped to prepare them for their profession. This benefit also is to extend directly to the hospitals of the medical center, to which the use of the laboratories will be available.

It is a fine gift and one that will make Pitt especially fortunate in possession of two research institutions—the Mellon Institute, for industrial study, and the Laboratories of Applied Science, for medical purposes, each the gift of Pittsburgh residents.

Dr. and Mrs. Edwards are well deserving of the thanks, not only of the University of Pittsburgh and the hospitals of the medical center, but of the populace as a whole.

We Trust Them, But—

We Keep Prepared.

That good old British admiral, Robertson, simply can't help worrying about the United States. You know, he thinks we are like Germany before 1914. Now he "fears that we lack faith in the Kellogg pact."

We don't lack faith, exactly. We are like the colored lady who moved from the brick church to the wooden church after the earthquake, saying, "I trust the Lord, but I don't believe in fooling with Him." She knew that brick buildings fall down, wooden buildings do not.

We find the French and British, dear friends of ours, sitting behind closed doors, preparing a little private deal of their own, a deal that, as British newspapers confess, ignored and shut out the interests of the United States.

France and Britain blushed when they were caught and the deal was exposed by the Hearst newspapers.

But blushing isn't what this country wants, it wants SECURITY. Therefore, good Admiral Robertson, while we don't lack faith in any European, we want to keep prepared on our own account, "just in case."

In Heaven's Name, WHY WHISKERS?

Traps for Germs, Nothing Else.

BERNARD SHAW, ON LEFT, SMILES THROUGH WHISKERS. WHY DOES HE WEAR THEM?

Mr. Bernard Shaw, brilliant Irishman, criticizes everything, including Ireland, America and the British government. Why doesn't he criticize and eliminate his own WHISKERS, of which he wears enough to make a mattress for a small poodle dog?

Every man, of course, has a right to wear whiskers if he chooses. Some excellent men do wear them. Andrew Carnegie, who worked hard for his millions, then gave most of them to the public, was a man of whiskers as well as a man of good heart.

Nevertheless, we ask, in the largest type used in this column, WHY WEAR WHISKERS?

Whiskers are traps for germs, traps for food, especially as the whisker-wearer grows older, more careless. They hide the part of the face that needs improving—mouth, chin, upper lip. What is HIDDEN does not improve, no inducement to improvement.

Bernard Shaw considers himself one of the greatest human beings that ever lived.

Doesn't he know that Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, were all close shaven?

Why not be like Alexander, Caesar and Napoleon instead of being like Napoleon's French poodle, if he had one?

Once men needed whiskers, in old days, when hair grew down over the face, neck and part of the breast. It was protection from cold. And in primitive fighting men used to bite each other's faces as they grappled.

It was some protection to have your cave man enemy get a mouthful of whiskers instead of the jugular vein that he sought.

But WHY WEAR WHISKERS NOW?

They are not ARTISTIC, they are not MANLY, they are out of place anywhere except on Santa Claus, and then they are usually artificial.

Tales That Are Told

A Sure Thing

AT a certain hotel a card-sharper made the acquaintance of a fairly innocent-looking old man, and after a polite chat suggested a game of cards.

His new-found friend agreed, and they started to play without more ado.

Unfortunately, the manager of the hotel did not allow this sort of thing and shortly afterwards he appeared on the scene and interrupted them.

"You can't play games of chance here, I am afraid, gentlemen," he said courteously.

"It isn't a game of chance," snapped the sharper angrily. "My friend here has no chance at all."

Suspicious

FOR over half an hour a small boy had been persistently whistling outside the butcher's shop. Finally, the butcher could stand it no longer. He rushed out into the street.

"Stop making that confounded noise, you little wretch!" he shouted angrily.

"I've lorst me dog," said the small boy, who was not a bit frightened.

"Well," the other calmed down a bit, "do you think I've got your dog, then?"

"I dunno," muttered the boy. "But every time I whistles those sausages of yours moves."

Standing

THAT inevitable quartet, the Englishman, the Irishman, the Scot, and the Jew, entered a saloon bar. The Englishman stood a round of Scotch, the Irishman stood a round of Irish, the Scotsman stood six feet one and a half, and the Jew stood and admired him.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

THERE was an uplifter come to town to make everything all right. For one thing, he decided he'd get the prominent citizens all lined up to work for some of his pet plans for improving the world. So's to get them to do what he wanted, he had to cure them of wasting their time on foolish things. So he went to the president of the Chamber of Commerce, and he says, "Say, ain't it a kind of a shame the amount of time wasted by your members playing golf?"

"That's what I tells 'em," says the president. "Some of 'em wastes hours and hours swinging at the ball and getting ready to swing. I'm trying to get 'em to all attend the golf school two days a week, and then they can play twice as many holes in half the time. Want to get in on the propaganda with me?"

ASTRONOMY IN BANK

By Garrett P. Serviss

A SAVINGS bank in the Borough of Brooklyn, constructing a modern building of aspiring altitude for itself proposes to spend $150,000 for an "astronomical ceiling," on which will be depicted a representation of a portion of the zodiac. It will be based on pictures in Burritt's atlas, which has delighted several generations of amateur astronomers, and is to be done in golden Venetian glass mosaic.

"Sic itur ad astra" (such is the way to the stars) is not a bad motto to encourage thrift, and that motto seems to be implied in the selection of this ceiling adornment. In fact, astronomical symbolism has been gaining ground of late, and stars, constellations, planets, comets, meteors and telescopes are playing a growing part in both the art of decoration and that of advertising.

What could be finer in influence than pictures showing the association of the stars with human ideals of beauty, of heroism, of aspiration, and above all, of super-terrestial destiny? All men will not lift their eyes to the heavens as they are in nature; but many will turn from a pictured dome to see the reality in a new light. The constellated sky is a great gallery in which are hung creations of the human imagination whose interest is at once historical, aesthetic and scientific.

Perhaps there is a special significance to be attached to the equipping of a house of money with an astronomical ceiling. Thus to the spirit of worldly thrift appeals the eternal call of the stars, the voice of the vast universe in which the earth is lost, the voices of universes beyond the universe.

When the grandson of Scipio Africanus (as told in Cicero's beautiful "Somnium Scipionis") sat upon the scintillant arch of the Milky Way, beside the shades of his father and grandfather, contemplating the marvels of the universe, and listening to the "music of the sphere," the fetters of his earthly experiences still hung upon him. For the great Africanus, diverting his thoughts fixed, like his eyes, on the distant speck that was our planet, said to him:

"How long will thy soul continue to attach itself to the earth? Dost thou not see into what temples thou hast come?"

Then the younger Scipio, moved by the stupendous spectacle and by the words of his grandsire, telling him that all these celestial glories constitute the "homum acteurum" (eternal home) of men who make themselves worthy of it, exclaimed:

* * *

"O Scipio Africanus, if it be true that the services rendered to one's country open a way to the heavens, although from my youth I have marched in my father's steps and yours, and have not, perhaps, lacked a share of your glory, yet now, at the sight of this prize, I wish to redouble my zeal and my efforts."

Whereupon the shade of Africanus replied:

"Yes, exert thyself, and know that thou art not mortal, but only this body of thine is mortal. Thou art not this form which may be pointed out with the finger, but that which makes a man is the soul (men's). Know, therefore, that thou art god (Scio igitur te esse deum). For he who acts, who perceives, who foresees, who directs and governs and moves this body, over which he has been set as manter, even as the supreme God is master over this world, is himself god. And as the eternal God moves the world, which is in part corruptible, so the immortal soul moves the perishable body."

There you have pagan faith at its highest, and, like Christian faith, it points to the heavens, and thence draws inspiration together with wonder. We cannot be roofed with too many ceilings bearing the images of these celestial symbols.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

THERE'S a great bit of wisdom in Julia Peterkin's new book, "Scarlet Sister Mary."

It comes from the mouth of a black woman—but sooner or later we must all discover it for ourselves, be we black or white, yellow or brown or red.

"You can nebber belongst to nobody," says Mary, "an' nobody can b'longst to you. You breath come an' go mighty sweet when e free, but strive to hold 'em, den e bitter."

You may not believe that. It is a very hard thing to believe. Most of us spend wretched years in trying to belong to somebody or trying to make somebody belong to us.

We try to own our sweethearts, our friends, our husbands, our wives, our children.

Life is so lonely. We want to hug other lives to ours—warm ourselves at other lives—escape into them—make them responsible for our happiness and safety.

But it can't be done.

"You can nebber b'longst to nobody an' nobody can b'longst to you," said Mary.

And someone else has said—

"Men are spirits clad in veils,
Man by man was never seen,
All our striving somehow fails
To lift that which lies between."

We can't lift the veil. We can't possess other lives or be possessed by them, but we keep on trying. And we are always disappointed and resentful because we don't succeed.

We feel that people are deliberately withholding themselves from us—or failing us in some sacred moment.

But—"you can' nebber b'longst to nobody and nobody can b'longst to you."

And the sooner you recognize that truth and begin to act upon it, the happier you'll be.

It may seem a grim truth at first. You may feel that there can be no happiness on earth unless you belong to somebody or somebody belongs to you. But when at last you realize that each man can only belong to himself, life will suddenly expand and take on new beauty.

You will no longer want to nag people, shackle them, dominate them, get even with them for fancied wrongs.

For you will see quite clearly that they have a right to their own lives. They have a right to love where they wish and adventure as they desire. They have even a right to make their own mistakes.

When you realize this, love itself becomes infinitely more precious. For the love that comes without demand is a real gift—only those who are willing to let love come and go freely, can enjoy its beauty.

Bible Passages

Baptism of Jesus

(Mark 1: 1-15)

THE beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God;

As it is written in the prophets, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.

And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins.

And John was clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey;

And preached, saying, There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.

I indeed have baptized yo with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.

And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

And straightaway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him:

And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

And immediately the spirit driveth him into the wilderness.

And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan; and was with the wild beasts; and the angels ministered unto him.

Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God,

And saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Sun

BECAUSE the sun is shining
Life all seems good again,
And yesterday's repining
Has vanished with the rain.

Too long the rain fell, beating
Like far, insistent drums,
A dismal dirge repeating:
But now, the sunlight comes!

Now every bird, divining
The joyousness of Earth,
Because the sun is shining
Breaks forth in lyric mirth.

So, ever in the going
Of swift and changeful years,
The tide of time in flowing
Brings laughter or brings tears.

But always there comes shining
Some sun of joy, hope, love
To end each weak repining
And all life's goodness prove.

Isn't It So?

The greatest virtue in the eyes of the world is success.

Giants Passing

By Herbert Kaufman

WHEN Thomas Fortune Ryan died, stock tickers didn't even shed a fractional tear.

Twenty years ago his going would have sent the market to a sanitarium.

But 5,000,000-share days haven't time to worry how individual estates will jump—or dump their holdings.

At the height of his power, though, quotations would have hung breathless over his sickbed and sympathetically waxed and waned with every pulse beat.

He and his group decided speculative course and opinion.

They ruled traction, monopolized tobacco, dominated power and light, governed railroads, owned coal and nickel mines, and controlled insurance funds.

His closest financial chums were Widener and Elkins, a former butcher and ex-street car driver, who would start out with a broken jack knife and bring home an ocean liner; James B. Duke, the red-headed wonder who brought the blueprints of the American Tobacco Company to town and laid its foundation in a three-dollar hall room; and Nicholas Brady, who kept bar in Albany and kept going until gas, electricity and transportation ate out of his hand.

A hard-hitting, hard-headed, hard-hating outfit with the saving grace of magnificent loyalties and anonymous charities.

Nobody exactly knows the immensity of their winnings. Or the full enormity of their philanthropies.

Some day a great writer will collect all the amazing facts of that companionate adventure, and write the log of the Good Ship Audacity on which they cruised in all likely cargoes from cigarets to trolleys, and from typewriters to diamond fields.

Of Ryan, himself, we shall probably learn the least.

His 28-page will, directing the disposal of "my three portraits by Sorolla and two busts of Rodin," betrays unsuspected traits of vanity, but little further biographical material, except a capacity for i-dotting and t-crossing, which hallmarks the rarest type of genius—the genius that provides for every emergency and leaves no loophole for the unexpected.

His passing all but closes a tremendous chapter in American affairs, in which Rockefeller and Baker alone survive.

"There were giants in those days, my son."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Those who know say the time is not far distant when America will lead the world in designing clothes for women and New York instead of Paris will become the style capital. This trend has become extremely pronounced in more ways than one.

Paris is already sending her copyists seasonally to New York and some of the French houses have experts permanently stationed here to watch for the changing modes in the glorified dressmaking establishments of Fifth avenue and the East Fifties.

The couturiere of Paris no longer gives that individual attention that was so flattering to the individual customer. The big salons have found greater profits in mass production. The dress once exclusively designed for the single customer is now turned out in gross lots.

It is a frequent experience of the American shopper in Paris who believes she has the only model extant to find a half dozen replicas at the concert aboard ship coming home to say nothing of the windows filled with them when she walks up Fifth avenue.

New York dressmaking establishments have acquired all the glitter and charm that once delighted the visitor to Paris. There is the same type of gushing saleswoman with a French accent to flutter and coo and walk all the way to the sidewalk with a departing "Bon jour, madam."

Many salons, too, like their French prototypes, are in fine old mansions of another period, with high ceilings, marble stairways, crystal chandeliers and mirrored walls. The pantherine mannikins are as slinking in their walk as those abroad. And prettier, if anyone telephones.

In other days fashionable ladies departed from Paris with two or three frocks and several capacious trunks and returned stocked up with the latest creations. Today the process is reversed. The well-dressed lady stocks up in New York before sailing.

Almost every ultra dressmaking establishment, incidentally, has what is known subrosa in the trade as a "Screaming Room." This is a sort of Chamber of Horrors far from passing patrons and soundproof. There are few places where women surrender so completely to nerves as in dressmaking parlors. A badly fitting gown or a long series of delays, disappointment, etc., frequently skyrockets a customer into unrestrained hysteria, and this is quite naturally disturbing to the trade.

Male fashions along the avenue this winter have a decided mid-Victorian touch. This is especially marked in the comeback of the Chesterfield overcoat with its wide silk faced lapels and well-corseted sides. The Chesterfield was hot stuff in the day of crinolines and high stepping bays when the great dandies never failed to parade the avenue at 5 o'clock. Other dips to the vogues of yesteryear are the return of the flat bowler hat, wing collars and the starched shirt front. Mr. Menjou, of the films, is said to have contributed largely to the latter sartorial renaissance.

* * *

Just as New York is nosing out Paris as a pace setter in feminine styles, so is Hollywood surpassing Gotham in masculine fashions. Great screen lovers must be elegantly tailored both on and off and many studios have experts whose job is to keep the heroes all Brummeled up.

* * *

These style vagaries sent me to the telephone—what's a dime after all?—and a famous dressmaker said Milady could not keep up to the minute in clothes for less than $15,000 a year. A gentleman's tailor said a complete wardrobe for Migentleman would total around $5,000.

OH, THESE WOMEN

By Leola Allard

A LADY who lost her wealth by retaining her extravagant habits was wondering what to do to make her own living. As it happened to be about the holiday season she decided to buy and sell Christmas presents. Her credit is good, so she bought some lovely gifts, let her many friends know, and set up shop in her Eighty-fifth street apartment in New York.

Each present was sold for what she thought the buyer wanted to pay. Besides this, she wrapped the packages in pale blue tissue paper, with red ribbon and a spray of holly.

It's all very lovely, but where is the poor dear going to find herself financially after the holidays?

But isn't there something about her you like, just knowing that she had the real spirit of Christmas, in spite of her own reverses? What a person she must be!

A stenographer from the office of one of her friends thought to take advantage of the chance to buy something lovely and went to her apartment. She knew the girl was of very moderate means, so she sold her a $5 gift for $3 and put in an extra spray of holly.

Haven't you noticed that people like her somehow manage to get along? Which indicates that God is in His heaven, any ideas to the contrary notwithstanding.

In 1665 every bachelor in Quebec was ordered by law to marry within a fortnight because the rival English colonies were growing more rapidly. Some ship loads of prospective brides were brought in, and the men went aboard to choose their mates. The men chose the fat girls first, and one reason they gave was that they were less active and couldn't gad so much.

The women are all trying to reduce and statistics say that the number of marriages are decreasing.

Almost all scolds are scrawney.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

HOW do you greet the stranger who comes to live in your community? At introduction, do you look him or her up and down, slowly, extending your hand?

Do you ask a few obvious questions, pass a few conventional good wishes, and let it go at that?

Even your face was guardedly pleasant in that greeting.

Nothing spontaneous and cheering about it—for how could you know just how these strangers would fit in with your ideas of neighbors in a community?

And so you lost one of the finest opportunities of doing some good.

You closed the doors of interest, instead of opening them.

You froze the expectant joy of the newcomer in his or her advent in a perhaps enforced change of residence which was supposed to better his or her condition.

Lonesomeness there was bound to be, and longing for understanding friends.

Hope, perhaps, had played a large part in the uprooting of old home ties.

But hope died when it met the general air of indifference elsewhere.

Do you want to have this effect upon strangers, perforce?

Haven't you a cheery greeting, a helpful gladness, to see the new faces?

If you have never been a stranger within the gates, you can't appreciate just what this means to a large proportion of your population.
